ASTERS AND MUMS
Asters and chrysanthemums are the glory of the autumn flower garden. They provide masses of colorful blooms when other perennials have faded into oblivion and annuals have succumbed to early frosts. Both are members of the daisy, or composite, family. Aster is the Greek word for star, and chrysanthemum comes from the word chrysos meaning gold and anthos which means flower.
The hardy asters are descended from the types of plants which are now abundant in the fields and woods in southern Europe and North America, and are suitable for use in the rock garden and in flower borders and also in a naturalized setting in open woodlands. They are popularly known as Michaelmas daisies, and range in height from a few inches to over six feet tall. Colors range from white through lavender to purple and through pale pink to deep magenta. There is also one variety with small yellow flowers.
In addition to the tall Michaelmas daisies, a type known as Nova-England (New England) asters are becoming more popular. Harrington's pink, Barr's pink, and Rosanna are all beautiful members of this group.
The cushion type asters grow to 12 inches high and 18 inches wide. The dwarf forms are semi-dwarfed and are about 15 inches in height. The colors are rich and intense and are very hardy.
The hardy asters are easy to grow. They thrive in any ordinary garden soil that is fairly moist. They may be planted in early fall or in spring, and soon develop into large clumps. They should be divided every two or three years as they tend to get over-crowded.
The asters are a perfect companion for chrysanthemums. The soft lavender and blue tones are a perfect foil for the more vivid hues of the mums. The low forms can be interspersed with mums. It is the tall varieties, though, that can be used to best advantage. If used as a backdrop for a planting of mums they create a beautiful garden picture.
CHRYSANTHEMUMS
The perennial chrysanthemums are indeed the queen of the autumn garden. Their origins are lost in the mists of antiquity. They were cultivated in China 2,500 years ago and the cult spread to Japan about 1,500 years ago. The first mums in the Western world were brought to Holland in 1668, but failed to live. Successful cultivation was begun in France in 1788 and in England in 1793 and in America in 1798.
Since that time hybridists have improved the quality and have produced thousands of varieties. They are generally classified by flower form (variety) or by plant habit. Double, single, pompons, quills, sprays and spiders are but some of the types that have been developed. Colors include white, yellow, apricot, copper, bronze, pink, purple and blue.

THEY HAVE the happy faculty of being easy to transplant, even when in bloom. Nurseries and roadside stands have an abundant supply of bushy, well-budded plants that can be slipped into place in the garden to provide instant color. Water well for a few days and they will soon be completely "at home."

Chrysanthemums are easy to grow, but often those found in the garden are small and spindly compared to those just purchased from the nursery. Leaves, too, often look brown and the plants are small and spindly. If such is the case, the gardener should follow more closely the procedures used by the professional grower.

The best plants are produced from cuttings made from old plants, either in early spring or in fall. Good plants may also be produced from divisions made in spring and this is an easier way for the average gardener. Lift and divide the old plants. Use a single shoot for each new plant. Space and plant in full sun in rich soil that has been enriched with manure, or compost and chemical fertilizer. Space them about two feet apart as they resent close planting. As soon as the plants are 6 inches tall remove the growing tips and continue this pinching every few weeks until that time late July. This promotes full, bushy plants.

Mulching with peat moss, manure or compost during the hot summer months is beneficial and extra feedings will result in plants and flowers of extra size and quality. Watering is necessary during dry weather.

HEALTHY PLANTS will be able to resist diseases. If fungus or other infections attack the plants, sprays or dusts are available to control these pests.

Mums can be used effectively in the flower garden, in pots on the patio, in planter boxes, and tucked in front of evergreens near the entrance to the house. Plant some where they can be enjoyed from indoors. They will provide a cheerful spot of color until that complement the autumn foliage. They will be blooming when other flowers have faded and the weather is no longer mild enough for outdoor relaxation.

REMEMBERS
Plant evergreens. Make the hole a bit larger than the ball around the roots and fill with peat moss, compost, or enriched soil. Water thoroughly after planting and plan on a weekly soaking. ... Seed news as soon as possible. ... Divide and transplant perennials. ... Plant small Spring bulbs. ... Mow now in lawns. ... Start a compost pile with fallen leaves and clippings. ... Water house plants indoors. ... Be prepared to protect annuals and some tomato plants from frosty nights.

Children's Aid Center Opened

Approximately 300 were in attendance Sunday for official dedication ceremonies for the new state office headquarters building of the Michigan Children's Aid Society, 300 Grand River Avenue at Drake Road.

The two story building of brick and stone is located on the site of the old C. F. Smith estate. In addition to offices for the state director of the Society, the 3,400 square foot building contains a formal lobby-reception area, conference room, library-conference room and a presentation room in which new parents first meet their newly adopted children.

The MCAS which was founded in 1891 annually provides care for nearly 2,000 dependent and neglected children regardless of race, creed or color. Adoptive services, foster care, help to unwed mothers and their children and care for teenage girls are provided by over 140 staff members and countless volunteers throughout the state.

At the formal dedication, MCAS president Dexter Ferry called for a re-dedication by all in attendance to the Society's mission.

He cited them as: "serving dependent and neglected children in the State of Michigan; to a quiet job of caring for children entrusted to the care of children's aid societies; in selecting and supervising foster homes and in selecting foster families; to secure financial support for our work in an adequate level and to spend or conserve wisely and without frivolousness funds entrusted to the Children's Aid Society; for a dollar's worth of value."

Editorial Disturbs Local Citizen

Dear Sir:

I read with a great deal of interest your Editorial of September 25, 1963, on the subject of Mr. Walker's legal action challenging the validity of Mayor Lindbergh and Councilman Peterson's affirmative votes on the motion to acquire the access route to the Farmington Center Shopping Area. It might be well to note at this point that the City has seven or eight points of access now and that the City of Farmington has invested approximately $90,000 of city funds in the project.

As usual, your Editorial was educational as well as interesting. I was not aware, until now, that long time residents of Farmington endows one with such wisdom and courage. I sincerely hope that when we relative newcomers have acquired the right to vote in the City, the City Charter anyone was authorized to verbally commit the City to a $8,000 obligation.

It has been my observation during two years of attending the majority of the Council Meetings that the concept of Mr. Walker's budget for 1964 for Farmington plays a major role in many of the decisions made at City Hall. I find no quarrel with this. The City Center has seven or eight points of access now and that the City of Farmington has invested approximately $90,000 of city funds in the project.

Magic Square Problem

Dear Sir:

Your article regarding the discussion between a group of homeowners and the city board regarding the location of the Flanders "Magic Square" was a great example of one person's initiative.

The taxpayers are not in opposition to the recreational "Magic Square"; only to its proposed location on the Flanders School property. This was the reason the article was published in the Enterprise.

You had an editorial in the same issue of the paper entitled "Let's get the paper clean first." May we suggest that the city board, before reporting to take such action before condemning these taxpayers for registering an objection to a plan which they feel is legitimate.

For your information, there is approximately 6 acres of vacant school property behind the school itself. These people have been questioning the judgment of the school board as to its reasons for placing this "piece of Woodward Ave." on 50 feet high hillside at line where there is this property seemingly available, Nothing else!

We suggest you get all the facts before telling people anything is in jeopardy.

Very Truly Yours,
Mr. and Mrs. R. Vanden Heuvel

Catch 3 Juveniles Breaking Windows

Three Farmington Township juveniles were apprehended by police last week after breaking windows at school buildings. The parents of the youths have been ordered to make full restitution for the damage, and the culprits are scheduled to appear in Juvenile Court to answer the charges.

A Township Police Chief Irving Bates announced another crackdown is on to prevent tampering with mail boxes in the Township. Several reports have been made of mail boxes being tampered with and recently a 15-year-old federal investigation.

NCCW Speaker Slated Oct. 8

Mrs. O. E. Wolford, Jr., Chairman, Public Relations Committee, National Council of Catholic Women will address the first meeting of the Women's Division of the National Conference of Catholics and Christians on Tuesday, October 8, at 2:15 at the Episcopal Diocesan Cathedral Center, 4500 Woodward Avenue.

Mrs. WOLFORD served as general chairman of the 1959 National Council of Catholic Women's Convention held at the Cobo Hall. Her subject to the Women's Round Table will be "Poverty of Spirit."

The meeting will open with a social hour which will give the members an opportunity to enjoy a dessert luncheon and get acquainted with one another.

Harold Hunt is Chairman, Mrs. Harold Schachorn is Program Chairman, and Mrs. Christopher Rameau is General Chairman of the Women's Division.

After the program a visit to the Episcopal Cathedral Church of St. Paul will be made. Beliefs of the faith and the religious symbols will be explained followed by a question period.

The meeting is open to all interested women.

Yours Very Truly,
E. E. Sauter
