At Home in Old Homestead

MARY CHECKETTS 474-5705

"Although it was a miserably damp and drizzly night, the suburban's younger set turned out in large numbers to trick or treat."

On such a night the hot chocolate, coffee and doughnuts tasted better than usual and second were just as good. A word of explanation to those that wondered why there wasn't a bonfire as promised. It had been raining for a state-wide day on fires prevented the township authorities issuing fire permits. Even though it had drizzled most of the day, it hadn't been sufficient in the late afternoon to allow me to obtain a permit. By the time the State lifted the ban on fires it was too late for a permit for our fire.

That long-legged bird was a working overtime in our area recently. I almost was beginning to think that he'd completely forgotten me entirely! But a 7 lb. 3 oz. girl was born Thursday evening, October 17, at St. Mary Hospital of Livonia and we named her Diane Susan McKay Checketts. The paternal grandmother is Mrs. Mabel Checketts, Oakland Avenue, Farmington, and the maternal grandfather is John W. Leggett, Sr. of Detroit. Her two older brothers, Eric, 4, and Greg, 2, have taken quite a shine to her.

OCTOBER 15 will always be a memorable and special day in the lives of three little dark-haired girls in Old Homestead. Lynn Diane, 7, Lee Annette, 5, and Susan Kay, 3, the young daughters of Ray and Wilma McCright, 26073 Drake Road, received their final citizenship papers before Judge Freeman in the Federal District Court in Detroit. The three little girls arrived in Farmington from Korea two years ago on August 2, 1961. Lynn attends Longacre

Elementary School while Lee and Annette attend William Grace.

Frank and Dorothy Furlong recently returned from a three-week visit in the east with their son and his wife Paul. Mary and their daughter Jennifer. They commuted from Terrytown, New York where Paul now lives to New York City to see some of the sights and take in a few shows.

The reservation deadline for this coming Saturday's Thanksgiving Poluk is tonight. There will be a large variety of delicious food and desserts as usual and I'm cooking a turkey. There'll also be ham. I'm sure that everyone will enjoy the heavenly evening we have planned and I hope to see you there.

By the way, have you noticed all the pheasants in the surrounding fields since the pheasant season began? They're everywhere. It's safe to say they're knowing where it's safe to do that.
