Out of Range Of Religion

Car radios become more and more popular each year. How fast and so far that we lose contact with one of their limitations to mind. An excellent discussion was being held on an interesting subject, but with the passing of the miles, the broadcast got weaker and weaker. Finally it disappeared, leaving only a static hum. One either had to tune in a new station or back up into the broadcast range of the last station. Life is full of experiences like that. Sometimes we run so fast and so far that we lose contact with our family, home, house of worship and the values they help preserve. We need these values if life is to have meaning. Many people won't stop in a go back - they merely stop on the gas and tune in to new channels. When we begin moving too far and too fast, we can take a tip from Religion in American Life, which reminds us to visit house of worship this week. The thing to do is to stop for help us get tuned-in again to the real meaning of life.

1st Snowfall Gives Drivers Chills and Ills

One snowfall doesn't make a winter, but the first snowfall of the winter sets the stage. Children were thrilled by last week's first snow of the season. Grow-ups probably viewed it with mixed emotions. Chief of Police Joseph G. DeVriendt said that he is not a fan of snow. He is personally not a fan of snow, but he is not a fan of snow.
