The Farmington Board of Supervisors was not entirely satisfied with the sign amendment, since it will still allow signs in residential areas. He said the new amendment's size restriction on signs may serve as "ringing a bell" for those who don't already have signs on their property. It was pointed out by Brennan that the new amendment, while not complicated with burdensome licensing restrictions, could serve as an effective control where none had existed before and could be amended at a later date should the need arise. He also pointed out that not only the size but the number of signs allowable under the new amendment would act in the best interests of the township.

Seventeen players signed by Detroit Tiger scouts are with other major league clubs, 10 in the American League.

Ungraded Plan

(Continued from Page 1A) already expressed some interest in trying the ungraded classroom plan also. She was quick to add, however, that she did not feel that schools would change over to the continuous progress program hastily. Not only must teachers understand the workings of the program thoroughly but must also be clearly explained to and understood by the parents of the children involved before being started, she said.

ABRID POINTED OUT that this plan was not a change in teaching practices but rather a new method of curriculum organization where by the younger is allowed to progress at the speed he can without being held back by slower learners or forced to go faster than he or she is able to keep up with the whole class. The same books and training materials are used under the ungraded program as with the individual grade system, it was emphasized.

The continuous progress program training plan is not at all new and has been used successfully in the Milwaukee, Wisconsin area for over 20 years now as well as for some years in other areas across the country, it was stated. Each of the teachers who commented indicated that they felt this plan allowed students to become more thoroughly skilled in each area of education and that they found it much easier for them to teach pupils under this arrangement. ONE POINT that was made was the fact that it was important to the continuous progress plan that class sizes be kept small enough so that the teachers could work effectively with each student on an individual basis. The feeling was that some of the first grade sections in the ungraded classroom plan, as outlined by William Gagne this year had gotten too large. Abrid and his teachers expressed pleasure over the understanding and cooperation shown by parents of pupils who have been in the continuous progress program during the current school year. Parents seemed to be impressed with the value this type of training program has for their children, he said.

Supervisor Hall said the additional police manpower made possible through the passage of the special two mills tax will now allow the township to step up its efforts of traffic enforcement which is considered before speed limits or other traffic measures are approved by the state and county.

It was also stressed by Hall that recommendations by the township police department calling for a traffic study and evaluation by state and county officials of main roads in the township was already under way.

ONE PLAN WHICH is under consideration by the county calls for the removal of the mill in the southeast corner of 13 Mile and Middlebelt. Knocking down the hill which has a home on top it would cost an estimated $100,000.

It was pointed out by Supervisor Hall that, according to traffic statistics, 32 per cent of the accidents at the intersection of 13 Mile Road from southbound Middlebelt which offers no vision obstruction to motorists such as is encountered by northbound motorists.

The county and state authorities responsible for establishing traffic control devices and setting speed limits follows the survey findings and accident statistics in determining what measures should be provided at any given intersection.

Vehicle traffic must reach a certain volume before officials will approve the installation of stop and go traffic signals. It is also the contention of county and state officials that traffic signals do not necessarily reduce accidents.
