What was to have been a simple little potluck supper with a few of their neighbors turned out to be a delightful affair at the home of Mrs. J. H. H. of Kirkside Lane on Saturday evening. The seven-year-old son of the hostess, who was not completely in time for the party was turned into the real live volcano which belched flame and was surrounded with rock. The patio pit served as the roaring pit with guests seated around it. Hula dancers, Gertrude, Irene Lovejoy, Doris Pulgini, Lena Vukmir and Mel Kark, gave the party real authenticity, as did the huge array of Polynesian foods and decor. Ladies strolled in their muumuu's adorned with colorful leis.

The table was centered with appropriate fruits and flowers on a pink flowered cloth. A pink floral cloth and couch shells with plants were used for the coffee and dessert table.

Helping welcome the guests was Dugness in her flame colored lei, hula skirt and flowers tucked in her carabao. Dugness is the family dachshund. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Allyn, Mr. and Mrs.

Wm. Collingsham, Mr. and Mrs. Edw. Dolbols, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gorski, Mr. and Mrs. Les Hogg, Mr. and Mrs. John Kirk, Mr. and Mrs. Don Lovejoy, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McPhail, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Pulgini, Mr. and Mrs. Chas.
