

Tropical Fish Catching on as Area's Newest Hobby

Did you ever see a fish 'walk'? Or spit? Or how about even 'kiss'? For thousands of suburban residents in Livonia, Redford Township, Farmington and Plymouth, the experience is nothing new.

These local residents are part of the growing number of collectors of tropical fish, which is fast sweeping through the suburban communities as one of the newest and fastest-growing hobbies.

And the 'walking', 'kissing' and 'spitting' fish are only part of the strange species of water life that they're collecting from all over the world. Tropical fish

Tropical fish are caught in warm waters throughout the world and shipped to a central hatchery in New York, from where they're flown in special styrofoam containers to dealers in this area and other parts of the United States.

From here, they go to the collectors.

Ruth Alveado, 31543 Summers, Livonia, is one such collector. Ruth's specialty is the breeding of albino pupfish. Another local resident, Stan Shute, is also nationally known in tropical fish circles, for his supplies. Gerald Gazda of Livonia, observer at the photographer, breeds the strange glowing fish called neon tetras. Only six people in the U.S. have bred them on a large scale, and Jerry is aiming to match their records.

School Halts Peddling of Anti-UN Tracts

An alleged attempt to disrupt plans for a competitive examination on the United Nations was described by the principal of Clarenceville High School on Thursday before a meeting of the Board of Education.

David McDonald told the Board that he had requested three women from outside the school district to stop distributing anti-UN tracts to students on school property.

He said the three were giving pupils, as they left the school last Thursday, sheets labeled "The UN is the Devil's Playground." They were published, school officials said, by a group called the "Southern Conservative Inc."

McDonald said one of the ladies had called a teacher at the school who had organized a competitive exam on the UN and was published in the press asking to talk to him about it. The examination, McDonald added, had the approval of the

GETTYSBURG, Pa. Nov. 19, 1863 - "... our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that ALL MEN ARE CREATED EQUAL."

In February, as we honor the birth of an outstanding President, let us not forget these words - a short, clear statement of the true meaning of America, spoken by a northern backwoods lawyer who rose to greatness.

Four score and seven years before this speech, given on a Pennsylvania battlefield, another American, a Southern aristocrat, had written: "We hold these truths to be self-evident. That all men are created equal. That they are endowed by their creator with certain unalienable rights - life, liberty ... pursuit of happiness."

Our history, from 1776 to 1863, 1863 to 1963 has been an attempt to secure the unalienable rights.

One right supersedes all others - and as this right is guaranteed universally, all others will follow. I agree with former President Eisenhower that with the right to vote guaranteed and insured to all citizens everywhere, Americans can, through equality at the polling place, achieve equality everywhere.

As a teacher of American history, I think that the fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution and its enforcement, voter registration drives and removal of barriers to voting become the most important elements in the drive toward equal rights.

There is yet another aspect to the drive to secure rights. In our free-democratic society, we may disagree on how to secure them; we may argue that in securing the right of one, we take away that of another; we may debate whether it is the role of government to determine what equal rights are and how they should be insured; we are divided as to what level of government should have primary concern in the area of equal rights. In the United States it is right and just that we disagree on methods and roles.

But, if we truly understand the history of our country, if we truly respect and strive to uphold the basic ideals of America, we cannot disagree on goals. All men are created equal, all men are endowed with certain unalienable rights, all men should be guaranteed equal opportunity, all citizens have the right to participate in decisions affecting society (especially through the right to vote).

If we accept these goals, we can proceed, as Lincoln outlined: "With firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work."

And, although much of the fascination comes from watching strange species like Siamese fighting fish, shipped here direct from the Orient, fish have their practical side too. One of the most popular newcomers is the small version of the man-eating flesh-eating piranha. "We use them as garbage disposals," report the suburban fanciers.
