

Guttering Is Key to Long House Life

Maintaining a healthy roof drainage system is important in securing long life throughout the house.

Lack of proper gutters and downspouts often results in damage to the structure, stripping on the sides of the house, erosion of the ground around the house, with water infiltration through basement walls, says the Roof Drainage Manufacturers Institute.

Lumber Cost Is Low for A New House

How much lumber goes into building a house?

The U.S. Labor Department reports that lumber and lumber products make up 40% of the materials used in home construction, but that they account for only 19 per cent of the total construction price.

The construction dollar for a single family dwelling is divided up this way, according to the report: 48 per cent for materials, supplies and equipment; 22 per cent for wages to on-site workers; and 30 per cent for overhead, such as administrative off-site salaries, expenses for sales office and yard operations, profits, and related items.

That means the materials that go into a home are still the best buy and that the high quality western lumber and other wood products used for the house framing, flooring, roofing, cabinetwork, paneling, trim, window sash and moldings are still a real bargain, taking only 19 cents out of every dollar paid for a home.

Dining Areas? Two Enough If You Build in Versatility

How many dining areas does the average home need? The answer is only two. And even more surprisingly, the average family home has at least three—a breakfast bar, a family room eating area, and a living room dining el.

Top home designers point out that providing eating areas throughout the house averages space—and that the average family can scarcely afford to have more than one.

Ideally, there should be a breakfast room which is large enough to accommodate the entire family for sit-down meals. A bar is no substitute, say these knowledgeable designers, since it's uncomfortable, unattractive, and through the poor manners and bad eating habits.

In addition to the breakfast room, the home needs a good, separate dining room.

If properly designed, this dining room will work as well for pleasant, relaxed family meals as a daily basis as for formal dining.

The key to its versatility lies in the shell. Walls should be rich textured, but neutral. Wood paneling, especially a golden tone wood like western hemlock or ponderosa pine, is perfect for the purpose.

The floor should boast a good rug that works as a background color for both best china and casual diners. A two-toned combination with ladder back, rush seat chairs.

The dining set must also be versatile, but a definite character is often the key to success. A fine old mahogany table might be just the thing, combined with ladder back, rush seat chairs.

This sort of setting can dress up to candlelight and silver or dress down to eat on paper and brightly colored place mats.

To make the dining room functional for everyday use, a built-in china cabinet should be included. These work best when

Architecture Teacher Predicts World City

ANN ARBOR—There is good reason for thinking that a universal city—a merging of big metropolitan areas to cover the earth's surface—is not too far off in the future, according to C. Theodore Larson, University of Michigan professor of architecture.

"World population, now approximately three billion, is expected to reach 6,280 million by the year 2000. If present growth rates continue, it will take less than 35 years for the population to double once again," Larson notes in an article published in the October issue of Family Quarterly.

"If TRAFFIC conditions in the urban centers are considered bad today, just think what they will be like when there are six or seven times more people in the world!

"One important point," Larson continued, "is that a century is a very short span in the life of a city or any other urban unit. Today is not a bit too early to start planning for what will be needed a hundred years from now."

"A clue to the future form of the urban unit is contained in the fact that, with the industrialization of agriculture and the emergence of big metropolitan areas, the old distinction between town and country has become lost. It is no longer possible to tell where one settled community ends and another begins."

"As towns merge into one conurbation, farm lands shrink and surplus areas are turned into golf courses or industrial research parks or open spaces for regional recreation. The notion that a city must have any kind of boundary, physical or otherwise is an outmoded concept of medievalism," says Larson.

"IMAGINATIVE TOWN planning and asking, should construction stop with megalopolis? Isn't there a still larger unit of urban growth just ahead, one which takes in the whole of each continent? And if this comes to pass, won't the entire earth eventually then become a single integrated urban entity?" Larson asked.

The goal of a single integrated urban community eventually embracing the entire earth's surface implies a wide range of coordination in urban planning," the educator notes. "Working contacts must be established with counterparts in other countries, and even other continents. If the urban development of the world is to be planned within a sufficiently broad frame of socio-economic understanding."

"In an integrated world society, there will no longer be any need for each nation to try to be completely self-sufficient. Some areas are better suited to the production of certain commodities than others, and should specialize accordingly."

Larson continued, "It is a century is a very short span in the life of a city or any other urban unit. Today is not a bit too early to start planning for what will be needed a hundred years from now."

Plan Now For Bar, Powder Room

Start the year on the right foot by improving your bathroom on either side to permit an available free plan showing how to build a bar and powder room. The powder room is a common plumbing wall.

This idea is economical because both facilities make use of the same plumbing lines. If space is at a premium, this plan is just what you're looking for. The bar even folds back in the wall when not in use.

It can be locked shut so that the children can not use it as a plaything during the day.

Washable paneling is specified for all walls, ceilings and counters.

A variety of pleasant colors, wallgrains and patterns is used to create a modern decor.

Local lumber dealers carry this material, which can be damp-proofed. This durable paneling, which will withstand hard wear, never needs painting or refinishing.

To obtain copies of the free plan, write Handyman Plans, P. O. Box 250, Dover, Ohio 44622. Ask for Plan No. 1011 for the Bar-Powder room.

Here Are Tips About Oak Floors

Proper installation is the key to the superior performance which oak floors have a right to expect from oak floors, the National Oak Flooring Manufacturers Association declares.

Anyone building a home would do well to cultivate a speaking acquaintance with approved practices, the observation of which helps insure floor beauty and lasting satisfaction.

HERE ARE a few pointers from the association:

1. Oak flooring should be laid only after all plaster work has dried. Preferably, too, all other construction should be finished, plumbing installed and painting completed before finish flooring is installed.

2. The flooring should be delivered about five days before installation. The house should be heated to a temperature of about 70 degrees, with the flooring piled loosely in the building.

3. If delivery occurs during wet weather, the flooring should be covered with tarpaulin or otherwise protected from dampness.

When proper procedures are followed, expansion and subsequent contraction are minimized. That's due to the fact that the flooring, scientifically kiln dried at the mill, adjusts to the normal atmosphere of the house. Therefore there is little danger of cracks developing.

In houses built over crawl space there should be a soil cover of four mill polyethylene film or 55-pound rolled roofing.

Put A Ceiling On Old Cracks In Bathrooms

Cracked, peeling bathroom ceilings are an eyesore to any homeowner, but especially to one who has recently completed a remodeling job. Heat and moisture from the tub-shower area cause this aggravating condition.

Many homeowners are taking steps to eliminate this problem in the future by installing plastic-surfaced hardboard ceilings.

The blocks, which come in colors and patterns, can be damp-wiped clean. They are factory-treated to withstand high heat and humidity conditions, and never require painting or refinishing.

Easy to handle, the 16" square blocks can be put up right over old, cracked ceilings. Tongue-and-groove edges simplify installation. Wallboard adhesive is used to secure a strong bond.

Plastic-surfaced hardboard also comes in four-foot panels and 16" x 8" planks for use on wall areas.

Country Styling Helps Bedroom

Here's how to introduce the warm, intimate country look into a bedroom.

Begin with walls paneled in flat grain western hemlock, installing the boards horizontally and finishing them clear.

Next choose a hooked rug or braided rug, waving exposed wood flooring till it glows.

Then, dig through attic treasure troves for one or two good antique dressers or commodes, restoring them for modern day use.

If you should be lucky enough to discover a patchwork quilt, use it as a throw on the bed and let your color scheme for rug and curtains revolve around that main colors of the quilt.

Garden Hose Can Cure "Ice Dam" in Gutters

Home owners with snow piled on their rooftops can prevent possible damage to wallpaper and other interior decorations with a few hours of easy work, according to a noted roofing authority.

All that is needed to prevent possible staining of ceilings and wallpaper is a garden hose that will reach to a source of warm water.

It is suggested that snow

Homeowners Urged to Use Wood Sash

Why do so many homeowners insist on wood window sash? The answer might be found in the results of a heat transfer study published recently.

According to the heating engineers who conducted the tests, a wood window with a single thickness of glass reduced heat loss or heat gain as much as 22 per cent when compared with the same size window made with other sash materials.

Wood sash showed an even greater advantage when double-glazed windows were used. With double-glazing, the heat loss was 37 per cent less for wood units than for metal sash.

For the homeowner, that means big savings in heating and cooling bills with no loss of freedom in choosing window styles.

Windows of ponderosa pine are readily available in sliding, casement, vent, bow, bay, awning, hopper, double-hung, and picture window styles, as well as window-door combinations.

Can Pantry Low-cost canned goods pantry can be built in a space only 6 inches deep, finished with stock ponderosa pine louvered door and pine shelving.

Should it be a but-joint tongue-and-groove wall? Would a pattern be preferable? Is a knotty grade more interesting than a clear grade; would rough-sawn or saw-textured panel boards be better than smooth surfaced lumber?

What will the paneling look like if it's finished clear? Can it be color-corded or stained a natural wood shade?

These questions are answered pictorially in a handsome, 16-page booklet just published by the Western Wood Products Association. The new booklet contains 24 full color photographs showing the 12 western wood species in various applications.

A copy of "What You Can Do with Paneling" is available by writing Department 5947, Western Wood Products Association, Yeon Building, Portland, Oregon, and enclosing 10c for cost postage and handling.
