Windows Brighten Up Home

There's almost nothing that can transform a house from dreary to cheerful like new windows. They let in light and make the outdoors part of your home, and add a sense of spaciousness.

With a wide variety of stock windows available at lumber supply dealers, it's easy to choose the right ones for any room in any house — Colonial or contemporary.

Many of today's wood windows, made of sturdy ponderosa pine, have small pane—diamond shaped or rectangular—to suit traditional architecture. Others have grilles that can be removed when windows are washed.

If new windows figure in your remodeling plans, you can choose from the following:

Double-hung: opens up from the bottom and down from the top. Like all the other types of modern wood windows, today's double-hung units open easily, close tightly, and are fully weather-stripped to prevent infiltration of cold air.

Casement: opens out to the side like a door to permit full ventilation and easy window washing. It is particularly useful in hard-to-reach places such as over the sink because it opens so easily.

Sliding: slides open at a touch and closes tightly for year-round comfort. Several are often used together to form a wall of windows between a living room or dining room and the patio.

Awning and hopper: similar in design, but awning windows swing out, giving protection from rain, while hopper windows open in and down, directing breezes upward to prevent drafts. Awning or hopper windows frequently are grouped in banks to make up one large window.

Bay and bow: both of these windows project out from the wall, giving a greater feeling of space to a room.

Attic Fan Aids Comfort At Low Cost

For a relatively small investment, a modern attic fan will take the summer out of summer for your home.

Although an attic fan will, of course, provide all the comfort of air conditioning, it can cool your entire home to the same temperature as that outside.

The modern attic fan can be equipped with a reverse acting thermostat that turns the fan on when it's hot and shuts it off when there is a temperature drop, a timer, or, in some cases, electrically operated exhaust louvers.

In this kind of installation, the fan "air washes" the attic during the day, pushing out hot, stagnant air, and then pulls fresh, cool outside air through your home at night. The fan's speed can be easily regulated from a centrally mounted control.

Homeowners can choose from two basic types of attic fans. One is mounted vertically where there is sufficient attic height, especially in two story homes. The other, designed for one story homes with low pitched roofs, is mounted horizontally. Each comes in various sizes.

Start Construction On Retirement Units For School Teachers

East Lansing—Construction of a unique retirement village for teachers was started last week at Saline. The Michigan Education Home Association (MEHA), a division of the Michigan Education Association, is the sponsor of the residence. MEHA Village which will eventually provide housing for 1,000 retired Michigan teachers.

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the Village were held Sept. 17 with Dr. Everett Ardis, director of the University of Michigan's placement Bureau, the featured speaker. MEHA President T. B. Southworth, principal of Bay City's Central High School, acted as master of ceremonies.

Planned to be built on the 254-acre site on the outskirts of Saline will be four private residences. The larger units, designed to initially accommodate 200 residents, will be built next year. The facilities will include efficiency, two- and three-room apartments.

In addition, a central commons will provide dining rooms, kitchen, administrative offices, club rooms and parking, hobby, beauty and barber shops, a country store and health facilities.

This fall MEHA will conduct a state-wide capital fund drive in an effort to raise $13 1/2 million for construction. A recent instant lottery drawing exempts from taxation donations made to the MEHA Project.

Stephen Nisbet, president of the President National Bank and former vice-president in charge of public relations, Greber Products Company, is a general chairman of the drive.

The MEHA Village project was conceived in 1959 by a group of Bay City educators. Since that time membership in the Association has grown to more than 4,000 and villages are tentatively planned for the following: Traverse City area and the Upper Peninsula.

Home Owners Spend $11 Million On Improvements

In home improvement activity, the trend is up and up. Last year, according to a survey by the U.S. Department of Commerce, the average homeowner spent more than $11 million on home improvements—roughly, $70 for every $100 spent on the purchase of a new home.

These figures, based on reports of the U.S. Department of Commerce, represent quite a change from the low of only $10 a decade ago, when $10 was spent for improvements to every $100 on new construction.

Cutting Corners

When cutting two pieces of molding for a mitered joint in corners, make each piece a little longer than necessary, then overlap them where they will meet in the corner. Hold rigidly together, forming a right angle, and saw through both pieces for a snug fit.

"Operation Facelift" Raises Home Values

When it's time to plan remodeling efforts, "Operation Facelift" should be one of the first on the list, say building experts. Applying a new "face" to a home's exterior, with a little paint, new siding, or a new roof, can raise the value of a home, and add lasting beauty.

By making a house safer against the elements, siding outside provides protection inside, thus guarding the appearance and value of any interior renovations and improvements.

Then, too, an exterior remodeling job is an investment for the future and a real enhancement of property value. "Operation Facelift" might begin with the choice of siding materials, and there are many, each with its own advantages. Anything from personal preference to local climate could be the deciding factor.

There's the familiar standby, wood—practical, economical, easy to shape to fit any wall. Wood siding is available in many types.

Basement Washroom Popular With Family

A basement washroom is a popular addition to any home. Its admirers include the home hobbyist, the man with the workshop, home gardeners and even the busy professional.

Double-hung as a mud room, it also becomes the place where children can wash and change before going to school. In installing a basement lavatory are advised to consult with a qualified plumbing contractor.

Many types, to create many architectural effects, and can be painted to carry out any color scheme preferred or stained for a rustic look. It does, however, require maintenance, through painting or varnishing, so the question of upkeep should be considered.

Modern low-maintenance materials include aluminum siding. Among its advantages are no warping, rotting, rusting or cracking and no danger from termites. In addition, it is available today in a variety of finishes and colors.

Grandma Had Her Troubles With Motors

How would you like to begin every washday with a search for the washing machine engine?

Fartetched, you say? Far from it. If you live on a farm 50 years ago, you might have had to do just that.

At that time, farms were practically without power. Electricity had come to the city, but not to the country. The many farms, the only horsepower for farm equipment was four-legged.

So when a washing machine company introduced a half-horsepower gasoline engine on a wooden washer in 1915 to help relieve the farm wife of one of her most backbreaking chores, it was only natural that the farmer would try to find a way to make this power work for him, too.

That he did. On washday, his wife could expect to look in the barn, the field or a dozen other places for her washing machine engine.

The farmer hitched it to saws, pumps and other farm tools, making the work, and it worked so well that the wife had a hard time getting it back to do the laundry.

Some of these 50-year-old engines are still around the farm. The company occasionally recovers a letter from an old-timer who reports: "I still have one of your machines that is run with a gasoline engine and it still works."

Ironically, the company received one such letter on the day our first astronaut orbited the earth three times.

Easy to maintain, too, and long-wearing, is asbestos-cement siding. A fireproof, weatherproof substance made from a mixture of asbestos fibers and Portland cement, it is resistant to rot, rust, decay, chemical fumes or corrosive salt air, and hardens through exposure.

It's made in a selection of shapes and textures, and in a range of colors from traditional whites to deep blues and pastels.

This masonry veneer are often used in combination with other types of siding. They include brick, stone and simulated stone. Here, too, color and pattern choice is excellent.

Durable and easy to handle, plywood siding is becoming a popular resurfacing material. Speed of application is one of its advantages, as it comes in large panels.
