Building Guarantee Promises Long Life

Many home-building materials are covered by guarantees, bonds, or warranties issued by their manufacturers. They are important guides to the performance that can be expected of a product.

When a family buys a new house, they should ask the builder to turn the guarantee certificates over to them. When a guaranteed product is used in home improvement, the certificate is available through the specialty contractor who does the work—a roofing contractor, for example.

Some materials available with guarantees, bonds, or warranties are:

- Insulating glass. Sealed double-pane glass for windows is guaranteed for five years against the formation of a cloudy film or dust penetration between the two sheets of glass.
- Asphalt roof shingles. All heavyweight shingles—those in the weight class of 300 pounds of material for each 100 square feet of roof—carry a written guarantee, bond, or warranty covering the home owner against defects in material up to 25 years.
- Fiberglass screening. This material is guaranteed for five years against denting, shrinking, corroding, and rusting that results in sidewall stains.
- Water heaters. Headers are guaranteed for five to ten years against defect in workmanship or material under normal use.

Garage doors. A one-year guarantee is issued against defects in materials or workmanship. Doors also are available with a lifetime warranty against splitting, checking, or delamination of the inset panels.

Windows Help Make Your Home

How important are the windows in your home?

They're highly important, not only as a means of bringing light into the house, capturing a view, and controlling ventilation, but also as a decorative element.

The exterior appearance of a house depends on window style, and a room interior can easily be spoiled by a poorly placed or badly designed window.

Luckily for today's home owners, there's an almost unlimited choice of window types available in top quality ponderosa pine units—picture, hopper, double-hung, awning, vent, bow, bay, casement, and sliding.

If you don't find what you want among the stock units, it's easy to have windows designed to personal specifications using easily worked ponderosa pine or Douglas fir lumber for the framing.

Cooling Unit Only Foot High

It's a mistake to think that pollen is something that causes sneezes, tears, irritation, and discomfort only during a few weeks in the fall. Actually, there are overlapping pollen and mold spore seasons almost throughout the year.

In most cases, tree pollens come first, starting as early as January and running as late as June. Then the grass and weed pollens take over. Worst of all, probably, is the ragweed pollen season in August and September.

That's why the filtering action of a central air conditioning system ranks high on the list of benefits provided by whole-house cooling, says American Furnace Company, a leader in the home comfort field. The system's built-in filters remove much of the air-borne pollen from the house.

In homes where allergies are a problem, it is well worthwhile to consider an electronic air filter. Added to a central cooling and/or heating system, this device will take up to 90 per cent of the pollen, dust, bacteria, and other impurities from the air.

Garage Wall Good Spot For Storage

If you're building a new garage or carport this spring, do yourself a favor and include a wall for storage.

The storage wall can be an indoor-outdoor design, with some closets opening to the garage interior for storage of sporting goods, auto supplies, and miscellaneous items.

Closets in the other half of the wall can be built to open to the yard, providing the ideal place to keep garden equipment.

A wide roof overhang is needed to insure weather protection for the closets opening to the garden, and closet doors should be built of top quality western siding like ponderosa pine, Douglas fir, and western red cedar.

Resawn siding lumber will require little upkeep. Stained with two coats of exterior-grade stain, the finish will last many years. Paint to match h-o-v-a siding may also be used on both resawn and smooth-surface siding lumber.

Cooling System Filter Helps Fight Off Pollen

One of the newest developments in home comfort is a central air conditioner which is only a foot high.

This compact unit will cool an entire apartment or a smaller home from a turned-down closet or hallway ceiling, according to the manufacturer, American Furnace Company, St. Louis.

What's more, it can be combined with electric duct heaters to warm the home or apartment in winter. Thus, from a space 13 inches high by about two feet square, you can have year-around comfort.

The small cabinet, housing a blower and evaporator coil, is connected with a network of ducts which carries the conditioned air to the living areas. These ducts usually are located in an overhead crawl space or in the ceilings.

Completing the system is an AFCC compressor-condenser unit, which can be mounted either horizontally or vertically through a convenient exterior wall or can be placed on a concrete slab outdoors.

The system is designed for apartments and homes with 600 to 1,100 square feet of living space. There are two models available.

Aimed primarily at the apartment and multi-family market, the foot-high units also are expected to bring central air conditioning to many lower-priced single-family homes, the manufacturer said.

Use of the compact system is anticipated in both new construction and modernization of older buildings.
