GOING UP

'CURTAIN

Stratford's Shakespearean Festival has moved silently into its thirteenth season without the advance fanfare of the usual big name stars.

Perhaps the management thought possibly they were in for a streak of bad box-office luck with season thirteen looming ahead.

The 1965 company includes the versatile Douglas Campbell this year. He's making a farewell visit.

Campbell has directed "Julius Caesar" and is playing the part of Holofernes in Henry IV for the Canadian company.

In 1958, when the Stratford folks did "Henry IV," Douglas Campbell played the roistering, boisterous Falstaff.

On Tony Van Bridge's interpretation suggestions is a softer, more affable portrayal.

On Saturday, July 10 and 17, "The Prince and the Pauper" will be presented.

On Tuesday, July 13, Andy Devine and Vivian Blaine, starring in the comedy "Never Too Late," will open at Northland Playhouse.

Receives Promotion

Albin E. Lochmayer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albin Lochmayer, 15608 Davis, Livonia, has been promoted.

On Tuesday, July 13, Andy Devine and Vivian Blaine, starring in the comedy "Never Too Late," will open at Northland Playhouse.

Rain's versatility and wide range of parts put him in the number one spot in the current ratings.

Stuart Burge's staging seemed to hit state at times. Stratford has always given the customers a great deal of swirl and scintillating action for their Shakespeare dollar.

The glamorous leading soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, Phyllis Curtin, will be soloist with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra under sixteen.

ROBERT WEBBER

Publicity Shy Actor

Featured in 'Sandpiper'

After completing more than 400 major shows for television, Robert Webber has devoted the greatest portion of the past year to the film industry.

There he exhibited his determination to perfect his acting and in his own words, "I don't want to be surrounded by a lot of cheap publicity, and then when the time comes to back it up, turn in a mediocre performance."

"Two Blind Mice" marked his stage debut and then came "Goodbye My Fancy" in which he played opposite Madeline Carroll in New York and in the national company.

Webber is a paradox in a profession which considers publicity its life blood. He has managed to guard his privacy zealously.

Born in Santa Ana, California, Webber stands a lean and lithe six foot one, weighing in at 170 pounds.

While still in his teens, he went to New York to begin his acting career on the stage.

Set Construction

To Be Explained

Fred Sammut, scenic designer for Northland Playhouse, will give a demonstration on constructing a set for a play at the Thursday (July 15) meeting of "Inside Show Business."

This is the fourth in a series of six weekly Green Room meetings sponsored by the University of Detroit Mercy.

Sammut will be assisted by Northland Playhouse apprentices as he illustrates the creation of the set for the current Northland production, "Never Too Late," from bare stage to the finished product.

Included in the program will be a re-enactment of the initial conference between director, designer, and showman.

Final two topics for the meetings, July 22 and 29 are "The Men on the Aisle" and "The Actor Prepares." For further information call the U. of D. Center for Continuing Education at 342-1000.

Three Livonians Touring Mexico The Musical Youth International 1965 tour group left Metropolitan Airport last Monday with three Livonia students as members of the tour.

There are 60 students in the group under the direction of Lester McCoy, assisted by the conductor of the band, Charles Kirsch.

The group will be met at Culiacan by Professor and Mrs. Arturo Camex, the MYI representative in Mexico.

From Culiacan the group will travel by chartered buses to Durango, Mazatlan, Guadalajara, Mexico City and Acapulco.
