

ALFRED L. DEUTSCH, president of American Savings & Loan Association, looks over fast-disappearing rare Morgan silver dollars which are being given to savers who open accounts of $200 or more or add that much to present accounts. "We're afraid we are going to run out," said Deutsch, who said the association started with 20,000 of the hard-to-get silver cartwheels.

$20,000 VANISHES IN HURRY

Amer. Saving Wonders Where Dollars Go

A couple of weeks ago there were some 20,000 rare Morgan silver dollars in bags in the vaults of American Savings & Loan Association at 600 Woodward and how!

That was when the association started giving away these coveted coins to persons opening savings accounts of $200 or more or adding at least that amount to their present savings accounts.

From the start of the giveaway, according to Alfred L. Deutsch, president of American Savings & Loan Association, the main office and branches of the association in the metropolitan area have done a brisk business in silver cartwheels.

While the exact number of new savings accounts opened since early in October is a secret, Deutsch said there had been some days when more than 200 new accounts were opened and rare silver dollars given to those signing up for a little saving.

Dates on the coins run from 1881 through 1887. They were released by the U.S. Treasury in Washington about a year ago and most of them quickly found their way into the hands of collectors and others who realize the present and potential value of silver dollars that are so scarce that thousands of numismatists across the country are trying to lay hands on them, in singles and in lots.

As many as 2,000 showed up in a single day at the height of the "run" when the treasury discovered the pile of silver in vaults where it had been placed many years ago and all but forgotten.

One dealer is said to have offered $40,000 for a bag of the precious Morgan dollars which had been minted in 1879.

Deutsch said that families are opening separate accounts for husband and wife and in some cases other members of the family, in order to get as many of the scarce silver dollars as they can while the getting is good.

Another advantage of owning one or more of the Morgans, said Deutsch, is that the silver content of them is much more than it will ever be again in this country. The government recently announced that it was putting much more base metal into all its silver money, including the dollars minted from now on.

One family, opening an account at an American branch, indicated that there was a plan the head of the house dreamed up which would make possible a $200 savings account for nine grandchildren, and, in addition, a rare and shiny silver cartwheel for each grandchild whose name will be on the American savings passbook.
