

Vice-President's Livonia Visit Is Open to All

Thousands of suburban residents will pour into a site on Six Mile Rd. west of Farmington rd. early Friday morning to hear Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey.

In Livonia for the dedication ceremonies of the new Adlai Stevenson High School and to kick off the city's 20th anniversary celebration of the United Nations, Humphrey is expected to make a major foreign policy address.

The Livonia Board of Education has invited residents of Farmington, Redford Township, Garden City, Nankin Township, Plymouth and other nearby communities to join Livonians at the public ceremonies. On hand will be Congressman Billie S. Farum, state senators and representatives and local officials.

The ceremonies are scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. sharp, shortly after the touchdown of Humphrey's helicopter, which will arrive here from Metropolitan Airport.

Spanish Visitors Impressed With American 'Mobility'

Three industrialists from Spain wound up a five-week tour of the U.S. and Canada with a visit to Livonia last week before winging their way across the Atlantic for home.

Mr. and Mrs. S. de Rota and Mr. E. Andres were the guests of J. A. Ditzhazy, a local manufacturing engineer for the Kelvinator Corp. Both Andres and de Rota are affiliated with the firm's Spanish subsidiary, Andres as a chemist and de Rota as an engineer.

"We're impressed by your way of living, the mobility and education of the persons with whom we've come in contact," the visitors said. "Supermarkets, the methods of housekeeping . . . these I found most interesting," said Mrs. de Rota.

All three pointed out that Spain is rapidly developing its industrial capacity. "Our standard of living is rising, and in the past five years, Madrid has grown extremely fast, much of

Conference Termed Huge Success

Colleges Meet at Schoolcraft

Officials of the Michigan Association of Junior and Community Colleges reported that the 31st annual conference of the Association was an unqualified success. More than 900 administrators, Board members, and faculty members from 24 Junior and Community Colleges attended the Conference on the Schoolcraft College Campus.

The theme was "Governments and the Community colleges"; and leaders of the 25 sectional meetings were unanimous in their reports that this theme provoked lively and valuable discussions.

At the same time, Dr. George J. Hall, Director of the Midwest Community College Leadership Program, and the Reverend Dr. Charles E. Morton, a member of the State Board of Education, spoke briefly to the Community College administrators of the state and led in a discussion of the effects of cybernation on community college goals and objectives.

The final session was held in Room 111 where Robert Theobald of the Center for Study of Democratic Institutions, New York City, was the principal speaker.

Theobald discussed the subject, "New Technologies and Institutional Changes." He said that the most revolutionary change in the world today is that man is achieving the power he has sought for so long—the power to control his environment.

He stated that the three main factors of this power are unlimited energy sources, sufficient resources of brain power, and the computer. He reminded that whereas there were one thousand computers in 1950, there are 25,000 in the United States in 1965. He outlined the spectacular drive of the nation toward unlimited productive power and claimed that there are sufficient resources in the nation already to abolish poverty if we really want to do it.

Theobald declared there is a mismatch between our present institutional and value structures and the reality of the world in which we are living. He gave as an example the assumption that we should provide decent incomes only to people who can hold jobs.
