Give a World Tour for A Christmas Gift

By FAITH GILLESPIE
Maybe you are very rich and would like to take your best-loved one on a world tour for Christmas, but you just can't spare the time right now.
Or maybe you aren't very rich, but you have been saving up for months to buy a special Christmas gift for a special person who loves the good things of life.
In either case, there is a perfect present, especially if the good things in life are considered to include beauty and books and dining and cooking: it is a cook book.
No ordinary cook book, this. It is a monumental thing called "A Treasury of Great Recipes" by Mary and Vincent Price (Amperess Press, Inc., 458 pages plus special sections, $20). This treasure is available in the fine book department at Sears, Livonia Mall.
Vincent Price, actor and connoisseur, and his artistic wife Mary spent years preparing this elegant volume, a magnificent example of the art of book-making. Its leatherette and gold cover houses stunning photographs of the world's foremost restaurants, and the menus and recipes therefrom.
