TAUGHT FLEDGLINGS TO SING

Methods of Mother Wren Were Thorough and Productive of Most Baffling Results.

The real musicians are the birds, and it is interesting to know that the young fledglings, in some cases at least, have regular singing lessons from the mother. A wren whose nest was in a box near a country house was watched by the family as she patiently instructed her little ones. Placing herself on one side of the opening, and in front of her pupils she first sang her entire song very distinctly. One little fledgling opened its mouth and tried to follow her; but after a few notes its voice gave out and it lost the tune. Mother Wren immediately took up the melody at that point, and sang it through as clearly as possible, when the youngster tried it again and finished triumphantly.
Then the mother sang again, and another nestling followed her, breaking down as the first had done, again beginning afresh. Sometimes there were three or four failures before the tune was carried through; but the wren always began where the little one broke down and sang to the end. These singing lessons lasted for some time, and several of them were given every day.

CUTTING OUT THE LIVER

What? Hungry Race-track Gambler Did When He Found a Ten-Dollar Bill.

Herbert Corey, the champion long-distance anecdote teller of the world, says that where he came from, in Ohio, there was a stranded, hungry race-track gambler who struck town and found the friend of his boyhood running a short-order restaurant, called the Saturday Evening Post. The restaurant man made his old comrade welcome and at first fed him copiously, but after a week or so grew weary of so unprofitable a guest and decided to give the waiters a gentle hint.

So he instructed the waiters to give him only liver to eat—liver being the cheapest thing on the bill of fare. The race-track man had liver for breakfast, dinner and supper—just liver, and nothing but liver. He lived on liver nine days; then, on the morning of the tenth he found a $10 bill on the street.

He made hotfoot for the most pretentious cafe in the place. The menu was printed in French. He beckoned the waiter to him.

"Have you got liver here?" he asked.

"This is liver," said the waiter, pointing to a line on the card.

The gambler laid a thumb over it firmly.

"Now, then?" he said, "bring me $10 worth each way from liver?"

WOMAN AS MOSAIC WORKER

Large Panel of the Virgin in Westminster Cathedral, London, Is Her Work.

In Westminster cathedral, London, a woman "master" mosaic worker, Miss Gertrude Martin, has been instructed with carrying out the mosaics in the Lady chapel. She is the only woman "master" mosaic worker in England, and her present work marked the commencement of her career as such. The designs, which are by Mr. Anning Bell, consist of a large panel, representing the Virgin, behind the altar, and four niches representing the prophets Daniel, Ezekiel, Isaiah and Jeremiah.

Miss Gertrude Martin says that when a child she wanted to be an artist, and when she was old enough she studied in art schools in England, finally going to Paris. She always has been much interested in mosaic work.

The panel of the Virgin and two of the niches are now complete, and are good specimens of mosaic work, especially the figure of the Virgin and Child. The faces, seen at distance, have a wonderfully soft effect. This part of the picture Miss Martin carries out herself.

CONCERT INNOVATION.

Concert goers have often been annoyed by the encore system. At next Saturday's symphony concert at Queen's hall the problem will be solved. If you like Scriabin's "A Poem of Fire," which has aroused controversy in Russia and is now presented for the first time in England, do not "encore" it. For it is to be played twice, the second time at the end of the program. Those who do not want to hear it again may go before the symphony starts again. It is a good idea to let out those whose digestion will not stand two goes of symphonies. It will be interesting to note how many persons stay at the end of the meal to take another out from the joint.—London Chronicle.

CHECK ON HER HUSBAND.

A Lakewood woman has made a wonderful invention and she hasn't protected it by patent or copyright, so it is now available for everybody. Listen to it.

A friend of hers was calling the other day and she said:

"How do you know when your husband forgets to mail the letters you give him in the morning?"

"Oh, that's easy. I always put a card addressed to myself in the bunch. If I don't receive that card on the next day I know that he has been delinquent. And I can prove it on him. And it only costs one cent!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

REAL TEST.

Uncle Ezra—Great crackly! You mean to say you don't think Wilson will make good?

Uncle Eben—Time'll tell, Ezra. Taft put that Washington team up in second place. Now let's see if Wilson can give 'em a pantsant.—Puck.

HARD TO KNOW WHAT TO DO

Many People in a Cast Like This Simply Would Have Held on to the Banknotes.

A man and his wife in town were congratulating themselves, just before dinner, on dining for once alone and at home. To them enter another man and his wife, who were neither known nor looked for, and had obviously come to the wrong house—a thing that, as a matter of fact, does occur—and all went smoothly till the women left the dining-room. Then the guest turned to the host and said, with emotion:

"Now do tell me the whole story about poor Sophia."

What was the host to do? With presence of mind, he replied: "It is really too painful. I hope you will excuse me."

"Oh, certainly, certainly," said the guest. "I would not be curious." And he changed the subject.

When the guests had gone and the hosts were wondering, a servant brought an envelope which the guests had left. It was addressed in pencil "For Sophia," and contained a handful of banknotes. Now, the hosts knew neither the name nor address of the guests and they vainly advertised for them.

HIS IDEA

Book Agent—The financial arrangements being satisfactory, I'll start out tomorrow to sell the book. Before going, however, give me a list of the prominent people in town.

Publisher—Must they be well-to-do?

Book Agent—Well, I'd prefer that they be easy to do.

HOLLYHOCK—FLORAL FLIRT.

Then there is the hollyhock—the worst flirt out! One never knows what to expect of it, except that it will always jauntily throw up its banner-spikes of bloom and look brightly and amiably at you. It is a stately coquette, it is pretty and willful. It won't grow in the place to which you carefully transplant it, and positively refuses to allow its seeds to germinate in the spot of your choice, but wantonly throws them about in the most undesirable places, and flourishes its coarse green leaves from the most impossible locations. Depend upon it! Not much!

After you have carefully purchased or saved the seeds from the most double of blossoms, and sowed them in fear and trembling, watched and protected them for a year, they will calmly open their flowers and stand there, unblushingly, and look you in the eyes, frowning with single-petaled bloom! Of all the beautiful, coquettish, tantalizing flowers, the double hollyhock is queen.—From "Flower Folks" in Suburban Life.

MEXICAN CONDITIONS.

They were holding a race meet.

"What's the matter with this horse you brought from Juarez?" demanded one of the judges. "The public is turning up its money on him, yet he can't run a little bit. What's wrong?"

"Conditions don't suit him," declared the owner of the plug.

"But we've had all sorts of conditions. We've had mud, a dry track, dust and everything else."

"I know; but that horse can't race unless there's a light musketry fire."—Courier Journal.
