

New Years Eve Glitters In The Suburbs

New Year's 1968 was ushered in royally in the suburbs with every kind of a party to celebrate its arrival. The champagne was iced, balloons were blown up, and tables were laden with party food throughout the area.

Jeweled and beaded sheaths were definitely high style. White, black and blue were top choice. Every imaginable kind of bead and jewel were sewn, embroidered or applied into milady's gown. Chandelier earrings and small crowns were also in evidence. Many of the men appeared in formal evening wear and seemed to be enjoying a gay time. If 1968 lives up to its welcome it ought to be a PARTY YEAR!

BEATNIKS
The beatniks, man, had New Year's Eve, too, and not just

le. Montmarie, or Greenwich Village? Over at the Koops pad were these beatniks making the scene:
