Last month, Karl Starkweather gave an early telephone history in Plymouth. In about 1865, people could contact friends and relatives by calling John Gales general store, where the National Bank of Detroit now stands, and have their messages relayed. There were two early telephone companies, the Independent and the Bell. The late Chauncy Rauch was treasurer of the latter.

The first switch board was about half the width of an ordinary door. The first directory was a printed card about 5x10 with about 125 names. The population was then about 1200. They later issued a second and a third card and then the first book directory.

A memorial was conducted by Frank Henderson for departed members Leona Harer, Edmund Watson and William Kaiser.

The museum is open every Saturday and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. or by appointment for groups. Recently scout groups and the Newcomers club visited the museum.
