

CORRESPONDENCE

Northville.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Liddle and daughter, Margaret, returned to their home in Milford Monday, after spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Simmons. Mrs. Simmons, who has been having serious trouble with her eye, is able to be out, although still suffering from pain in her head.

Mrs. Angie Hueston returned to Detroit Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. McKahn are visiting their son, Claude, in Milwaukee.

Mrs. E. J. Tremper and daughter, Grace, are now settled in the Joslin house on Dunlap street.

Orrin Peck has sold his house on Main street to Fred P. Simmons. Mr. and Mrs. Peck will move to Plymouth, where they have been working in a factory for some time. Misses Clara and Edna Woodworth were home from Detroit over Sunday.

Miss Viola McCully is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Orr Webster at Delta, Wis.

J. A. Huff, who some time ago purchased the corner block now occupied by Ambler's ice cream parlor, will in the near future commence the erection of a fine business block on that site. An effort is also being made to induce the owners of the other old wooden business places near by to tear them down and erect a handsome row of stores from the corner to N. A. Schrader's furniture.

Bertson Benson, proprietor of the Northville feed store, has traded the store to Henry Franklin for the latter's milk route. Henry and Merrill Franklin will later convert the store into an oil store, handling gasoline and kerosene.

A large addition is being built on Edwin White's house on Northside.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hueston visited the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Willis, Sunday.

Rev. C. S. Lee of Farmington occupied the Methodist pulpit Sunday morning, preaching a fine sermon and also delighting the audience by a violin solo.

It is said that there is a prospect of Northville having a gas plant and the promoters will appear before the council at the meeting next Monday night.

In the ladies' ball driving contest last Saturday night Mrs. Joe Miller won first prize and Mrs. Kipp second, while Miss Ruth Carter was the best speller in the spelling contest. The male quartette played the large crowd by a number of selections, and the band also furnished good music.

Mrs. Walter Palmer arrived here Tuesday from Gainesville, Fla., for a visit with her sister-in-law, Miss Katharine Yerkes.

Ray Baker has purchased a Ford touring car.

Bosc Line.

Joe French is not so well at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Greer spent Saturday afternoon and evening with Mr. and Mrs. Mark Seely in Northville.

Mrs. Glenn Allen was home a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Greer visited one day last week at Pontiac.

H. Bryan is taking tomatoes to Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Seelac entered company from Detroit Tuesday.

Wm. Simmons of Novi spent Monday and Tuesday at the home of E. Simmons.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Dennis were Northville callers Saturday evening.

Mrs. Harry Rear is real poorly.

Mrs. John Greer and son, Fred, and James Tucker spent Sunday and Monday at the home of the former's daughter, Mrs. Fred Skerritt, at Orchard Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Greer visited at the home of Mrs. Tucker in Detroit Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Thayer and daughter, Marion, were Detroit visitors last Sunday.

Conroy's Corners.

Mrs. Amos Otis and children and Mrs. Herman Schroeder and little daughter of Farmington called at Chris Spaller's one day the past week.

Mr. Cole and son of Rome, N. Y., spent a few days the past week at the home of his brother-in-law, August Layaz. Mr. Cole came to accompany his wife and another son home after a month's sojourn in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Reynolds are rejoicing over the arrival of a son, born Saturday, July 17.

Mrs. Harry Bartlett is entertaining her sister, Mrs. Richards, and two children from Canada.

Mrs. Eva Valerus and two children of Wayne are spending a few days at the home of her brother-in-law, G. V. Conroy.

The road commissioner is doing some good work on this street which has been needed for some time. Go on with the good work.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Gravin and little daughter of Franklin were Monday callers at Omer Conroy's.

Tom Densmore is erecting a new cement house on his farm recently purchased of Mr. Hinchman.

Mrs. Dan Boyle is entertaining her sister from Chicago.

Harry Reynolds was an over Sunday visitor with his wife and family at Troy.

Oat harvest seems to be the main topic of labor on Happy street.

Automobiles! Well, I should say. When did you order yours? You want to hurry or you won't be in the lead.

Well, if you want to know the reason of that broad smile you see Frank Shear carrying, it's a boy, born Wednesday, July 23.

Redford

Mrs. Comstock of California, who was Miss Natie Brader of Redford 25 years ago, has been visiting in this vicinity lately.

The family of Rev. Evans has returned from their visit in Canada and Wednesday they went to their cottage at Mountain Park.

Don't forget the Redford picnic at Bob-Lo Friday, August 8.

Saturday the Fisher Body company team will be here for another game. It will be remembered that they played here two weeks ago and the game proved to be the best one of the season, the score standing two to nothing. As Redford won that game they are after satisfaction and it is expected that they will come with a still stronger team this time. This doubtless will be a close game and one worth seeing.

The attention of Redford voters is called to the special election which is to be held on Saturday of this week to vote on the railroad franchise.

Fred Hantz, who owns the building occupied by Northrop's furniture store, has again painted the front a couple of coats of white.

Mrs. Eva Quarterman of Miami, Fla., arrived in Redford Tuesday morning for a visit with her daughter, Mrs. R. H. Burgess.

The frame of a new house for Chas. Bachman has been raised on his lot on the Miller subdivision.

The annual ice cream social of the Stars last Saturday night drew out a large crowd and the tent was thronged all the evening.

Dr. Tupper and family have returned from a short vacation, spent at some of the Oakland county lakes, and now Dr. Holcomb and family are away on their summer outing. They have gone to the Canadian location where they were a year ago.

The Dorcas Aid society served a fine supper in the basement of the M. E. church last Friday night and the tables were taken up by quite a large crowd.

A large number of ladies went to Bob-Lo on the Baptists' annual picnic Wednesday and acknowledged that they had a good time notwithstanding the fact that no men were along.

On Monday M. H. Hinton learned that the D. C. bunch of old fellows were to play ball in Redford on the following day and that they would be served with the customary supper after the game. Accordingly he put his shoes at work and provided and furnished a couple of dozen of more little cards of honey for use at the banquet. The cards were about an inch by two inches in size and were filled by an excellent quality of comb honey.

Mr. Hinton's explanation of the quick work by the bees is that he filled the little cards with pieces of comb honey neatly cut from larger cards and then asked his industrious little workers to furnish them in, which they did in such a perfect manner that the cards had the appearance of having been filled in the regular way.

At the time this paper went to press last week the date of the first ball game of the season between the Detroit team of old timers and the Redford business men had not been determined, but immediately thereafter word came that the city fellows would be out Tuesday.

The Record is very glad that it was unable to notify the people for it was a real circus that should have had a crowd to witness the funny stunts and the awkward antics of the players, whose ball records are now ancient history, but who refuse to quit on account of old age.

Burden with that captivating smile of his, was here and played first base like a big league. Not an error was charged on to Fred and he went away with a clean slate and a clear conscience.

Joe Weiss was unable to play owing to rheumatism in the joints, or something equally as bad, but, thank heaven, it has not yet reached the vocal chords and he played a staving good game from the bench.

Dr. McCormick was on the mound again for the visitors and he succeeded admirably in putting the local batters and the umpire as well.

Charley Labret played up sick so he would not have to pitch for the Redforders, but took the position of umpire where he seemed to prove his illness. It was hard to determine whether it was his heart or his eyesight that troubled him. Awful as it was, it might have been worse if he had pitched.

On the other hand his old side partner, Newman, went into the game and showed up as well behind the batter as a youngster of 20. He took Dr. Tupper's swift curves, up-shoots, out-shoots, up-shoots and down-shoots and in fact all kinds of shots as easily and fearlessly as he used to do in the old days and several times he threw clear down to third base.

It was "some game" and the score was 11 for the home gang and 14 for the Detroit crew.

Owing to reasons that will be clearly understood by those who witnessed the game, we refrain from mentioning the work done by some others of the local squad. Those who saw the game will also know that nothing can be said about the playing of Knowles and Dohany for they did none.

Great credit, however, is due Roy Hutchins for work behind the bat, but none while in the field. Hantz did well as 166g as his suspenders, lasted and Burgess, who played in the vicinity of third base, a straw hat and abbreviated shirt made an impression.

There'll be another one before long. Don't miss it.

SOUGHT BY THE "SPOONERS"

Certain Places Where Victims of the Wiles of Cupid Can Show Their Fondness Unperceived.

"Have you ever noticed that spooners prefer to ride on the rear seats of open trolley cars, where it is almost impossible to watch them?" remarked a man who does considerable riding in surface cars. "Well, the next time you have occasion to ride in an open trolley car you keep your eye on the rear seat and see if my words are not true."

"Many a time when I would like to get a place on the three rear seats I was prevented from doing so because they were all occupied by spooners. They prevented me from enjoying a good smoke. But I'm not selfish. As long as they obtain the seats first they have a perfect right to them, of course, and I don't have to move until they want to."

"While I agree with your remarks, responded another man, 'I think that I have discovered the most popular place of all for spooners when it comes to a question of vehicles."

"Some time when you ride on a stage on Fifth avenue look on the right hand side of the stage a small seat with just enough room for two. Now in the day time you will notice that the seat is just ordinarily popular; people use it no more than other seats on the stage. But in the evening, when the moon gives the only light, you will have to go down to Washington square to obtain that seat. The spooners get to the square early and struggle for the seat."

"It is located in such an out-of-the-way place that they can hold hands all the way up Fifth avenue and Riverside drive without anyone seeing them."—New York Herald.

AWFUL

Mrs. Newwed—Dearest, I made all this cake myself.

Mr. Newwed—Little one, you're too light for such heavy work.

LIVING MAJOR GENERALS.

Gen. Grenville M. Dodge, whose home is in Council Bluffs, Iowa, is one of three surviving army corps commanders, the other two being Sickles and Gen. James H. Wilson. General Dodge is the last surviving general commander, however, having been in command of the Army of the Tennessee and of the Department of Missouri. He was major general at the age of thirty-two years, reaching this rank in 1864. At that time, he says, he had in his command a brigadier general, in command of a brigade, who was barely twenty-two years of age.

MODIFIED VIEWS.

"You once said it was a disgrace to die rich."

"I have changed my mind," replied Mr. Dustin Stax. "It is not a disgrace; merely a misfortune."—Washington Evening Star.

PLAIN FACTS.

"You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear."

"No; and who wants to? Leather goods are all the go."

GLAMIS HATH MURDERED SLEEP.

"How did you enjoy the play, Gothrock?"

"Oh, I thought Macbeth was good, but who was Glamis?"

DOESN'T SEEM RIGHT.

"I see where a poet claims to make a living out of his verse."

"Yes, and he is being severely criticised for it, too."

CAUGHT THE HABIT.

"That yachting party are telling the biggest fakes I ever heard."

"Yes, and you can see at a glance that even the yacht is lying to."

PLEASANT TIME FOR HUSBY

Chances Are That He Had Much to Explain After This Little Passage of Arms.

People are smiling at the little passage of arms which took place between two young women at a luncheon the other day. One of the women is a beautiful blonde, a bride, and she comes from Manchester. No matter who the other woman is, but the bride met her first at the aforementioned luncheon, and, shaking hands in her characteristically cordial way, said: "I'm so glad to meet you. You have afforded me so much amusement."

"Amusement?" said the other. "Oh, yes," went on the bride. "I've been through my husband's desk, and I've read all his old love letters. I found several very warm and affectionate letters from you, and I enjoyed reading them ever so much."

"I'm so glad you enjoyed them," pursued the other. "But do come and see my very soon. I have the answers to all those letters, and you might like to read them. Mr. X's letters are ever so much warmer and more affectionate than those I wrote him. I know you'll enjoy reading them ever so much more than you did mine."

TELLING COLOR BY FEELING

Blind Men Easily Capable of Making His Way, Though His Eyesight Was Gone.

The most interesting competitor in a recent London poultry show was Capt. Pierson Webber, who while on service in India lost his eyesight. The searching questions in the two examination papers were dictated to Captain Webber; he took them down with a pin in Braille shorthand, and typed his answers on an ordinary typewriter. Part of the oral examination consisted of naming and commenting on the merits of twenty-five plates of various grains and meals which constitute poultry food, and here Captain Webber's sense of touch served him with complete fidelity.

Another ordeal was the naming of the breed and the ailment in each case of four live fowls, all of which were defective in one way or another. In two cases, by feeling the texture of the feathers, he was able to describe not only the breed but also the color of the fowls with perfect accuracy.

GREAT INVENTIONS RARE.

Invention to some extent resembles mining. Thousands of miners plod wearily through the mountains and valleys searching for precious metals or outcroppings of ore. One among thousands strikes the big bonanza. About 800 patents are issued every week by the United States patent office. Only one in many years is for something startlingly new and meaning millions of dollars to the inventor or the people who may gain control of it. Only about one inventor in every hundred secures a monetary return which will equal the cost of the invention and patent. Of the 40,000 or 50,000 patents issued every year there are few which are of such importance as to attract widespread attention, and only at long intervals is there an invention which revolutionizes conditions, such as the telegraph, telephone, the phonograph, typesetting machines, wireless telegraphy, aerial navigation, and moving pictures.—Arthur Wallace Dunn, in Leslie's.

WORKING ON CINEMATOGRAPH.

Edward Muybridge, an Englishman, devised a plan to make instantaneous photographs and to show them in rapid succession to simulate motion. J. Marey, a Frenchman, first used a continuous film and took the series of photographs from one camera. Thomas A. Edison, an American, made the film practical by perforating the ribbon and gearing it to a pin sprocket wheel so that each successive picture would register exactly over its predecessor. Lumiere, a Frenchman, invented the cinematograph, to project the pictures on a screen. And hundreds of other men have studied and invented and perfected the moving pictures as we know them today. And they are still working.

SAME THING.

Mrs. Slimdick—So you have placed yourself under the care of a physician who reduces superfluous flesh. Did he recommend any special diet?

New Boarder—No, madam; he simply recommended your boarding house.—Tattler.
