

Special Film on Deaf Available for Groups

"Silent World, Muffled World," a highly dramatic 28-minute, 16 mm. color and sound film documentary on the difficulties encountered by individuals with hearing problems, is available for private showings to adult groups of 50 or more without cost through the Deafness Research Foundation.

Financed by a grant from The John A. Hartford Foundation, and narrated by Gregory Peck, a most extraordinary segment of the documentary is filmed through a microscope operation — a stapedectomy — which has restored hearing to many thousands. Another segment consists of a series of animated drawings which bring to life the physiology of the ear, the mechanics of the hearing process, and hearing loss caused by certain disorders of the outer, middle, and inner ear.

"Silent World, Muffled World" traces the history and attitudes toward the deaf and the progress made in teaching a deaf child to speak. It shows the educational and rehabilitation methods used in bringing help and hope to those thousands who live in a silent or muffled world. The film depicts an extensive ear research program into the causes of ear disorders and dramatizes the methods by which research is bringing new medical and surgical advances in the treatment of those with impaired hearing.

"Silent World, Muffled World" explains how new hope for the deaf may be realized through the Temporal Bone Banks Program for Ear Research and how "battered" temporal bones of today's deafened may help spare future generations this affliction.

Organizations should send requests for "Silent World, Muffled World" on their stationery to The Deafness Research Foundation, Dept. HE, 366 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017.
