

Suggestions Numerous To Add Storage Space

Who's ever heard of the house with too much storage space? As someone so aptly put it, "This is an age of plenty—plenty of everything except the space to store it."

The problem with storage is that it's a private affair. To be workable, storage facilities must be located in precisely the right place and tailored for their contents.

In other words, what works for the Joneses may not always work for the Smiths.

However, ideas are always adaptable, and a booklet well having for the storage-poor family is one recently published by the Western Wood Products Association.

Colorfully illustrated with 27 photographs, the booklet outlines a multitude of distinctive and useful approaches to storage.

For example, it shows how slender bookcase units can be built from narrow panels of floor-to-ceiling glass to provide shelving for the library and cupboards for stationery and family files. It also shows how wide compartments.

The booklet containing these intriguing and useful ideas is simply entitled "Storage." A copy may be obtained for 10 cents by writing Department 516-P, Western Wood Products Association, Yeon Building, Portland, Oregon 97204.

Ex Rock Third

Michigan State University's Bob Steele had his winning record snapped last Saturday in the National AAU track championships at New York.

The great hurdler from Plymouth finished third in the 440-yard intermediate hurdles and as a result will serve only as an alternate in next month's U.S.-Russian meet in Los Angeles.

Steele had won 12 straight races before bowing to Jim Miller of Southern California and Geoff Vanderstock of Mt. San Antonio (Calif.) Junior College.

FORD MOTOR Company expansions in Livonia are adding more than 800,000 square feet of floor space to two of the company's three facilities in the suburb.

The National Parts Dept. (bottom) is being expanded by 536,000 square feet to make the building approximately 1,475,000 square feet.

After the projects are completed, Ford will have more than 4,133,000 square feet of floor space in Livonia, including the Technical Services Laboratory.

New Idea in Rug Buying: Include A Hardwood Floor

NEW YORK — When you shop for a rug at W & J Sloane, Inc., these days you just might buy a fine hardwood floor to go with it.

Quite a number of customers are doing it.

The famed home furnishings department store operates what is believed to be the only hardwood flooring department of its kind by such a retail outlet.

Observers say the department reflects the growing popularity of area and accent rugs against a background of rich looking hardwood.

Sloane, Inc. was inspired to open the department after noting the appeal of the attractive parquet flooring which had been installed throughout most of the store.

Customers for area and accent rugs began asking how they, too, could acquire such a lovely floor. Store executives concluded that with so much interest in beautiful hardwood floors Sloane ought to capitalize on it and accommodate customers at the same time.

Set in part of the carpet section, the department is virtually a museum of fine wood samples, reports Flooring magazine, a leading trade journal.

"Various woods are framed and hung on spotlighted walls like paintings in an art gallery to emphasize the wood's color and texture," the magazine explains. "Samples are also displayed in vertical swinging door panels for easy comparison."

The more than two dozen woods range all the way from American oak, the traditional favorite for homes, to Brazilian Freijo. There are some 18 distinctive patterns, including such famous classic designs as Fontainebleau, Versailles, Brittany, Bordeaux, Rhombs and Monticello.

A particularly striking offering is colored hardwood flooring, beautifully stained and finished. It is available in blue, green, red or practically any color desired.

One design, Nebula, is of deep blue-green stained oak rubbed to produce an illusion of changing depths of color.

In addition to the classic patterns there are such modern styles offered as random planks featuring wood or brass decorative plugs and striped floors utilizing combinations of teak or ebony.

Projects Add Value

Thinking of remodeling your home? Projects that add dollar value are addition of a formal dining room and enlargement of the master bedroom to permit a king-size bed and triple dresser. The dining room should be 12 feet wide by 15 long to accommodate 10 to 12 people at the table, as well as a buffet and china closets. A good master bedroom size is 14x16 feet.

Elsa Sales Up 12.5% Over '65 May

The Elsa Realty and Investment Co. monthly sales report for May showed a 12.5 per cent increase over May 1965. The total volume of sales was $2,210,400 as compared to $1,964,403. The sales have exceeded $2 million each month for the first five months of the year.

Stanton M. Elsa, President, commented on the apparent need for substantial down payments due to government action causing the tightening of mortgage money.

Lending institutions in placing their limited mortgage funds tend to be more discriminatory in checking the credit of the home purchaser and the down payment he is making.

Noting this as a possible cause to a future drop in sales, he remarked, "It is possible that these credit and down payment requirements could reduce the number of potential buyers 25 per cent or more."
