F'ton Scouts Attend Camp Chippewa

Day Camp Chippewa II was conducted during July for the Farmington girl scouts. The camp was held on 10 Mile Rd. just west of Telegraph.

Almost 150 children plus a staff of 25 combined to make the session a success.

Members of the staff from Farmington were: Ellen Schafer, director; Leona Sidwell, business manager; Delores Vanderberg, assistant business manager; Pat Reilitt, mobil unit helper; Caliair e Harkins, nursery unit counselor.

Unit leaders were: Ann Marie Kennedy, Valera Kurto, Sylvia Jardine, Gloria Birnie, Shirley Beatty, Josephine Schmitt, Hazel Novacheff, Nancy Simanke, Kittle Hastings, Glenna Hurlett, Jori Dickerson, and Doris Baker.

Sally Matmueller and Glenna Perkins served as the camp nurses and Betty Frankel was the nature consultant.

Test Schafer and Mary Ellen Kirby, older girl scouts, assisted at the mobile unit and nursery, while a Boy Scouts Pat Harrigan and Mike Schafer helped out at the boys unit.

All camp projects included a visitor's day, a Mug-wump Day and constructing an Indian Village.

AAUW Book Sale Finances Scholarships

Fifty-one American women scholars have received American Fellowships for advanced research and study from the American Association of University Women. One-third of them will pursue their studies in other countries.

In addition, 53 women from Australia, Europe, Latin America, North America, Asia, the Middle East and Africa will, for the most part, study in our colleges and universities this fall under AAUW International Fellowships.

These scholars, who will receive about $235,000, will be working in the natural and physical sciences—including medicine—and in the humanities. Four recipients will be studying at the University of Michigan.

In 1965, the Farmington Branch contributed about $1,200 toward the support of this AAUW Fellowships Program. Money is raised by selling used books. This year the AAUW Book Sale is scheduled for Sept. 29, 30, and Oct. 1.

Paper Clip Hems
To keep from marking delicate fabric when you turn up a hem as you sew, use paper clips in the garment instead of pins. The clips will slide along as your work.

impressions

by sue shaghenessy

It seems a curious phenomenon that three weeks before I leave on a trip I am asked if I have started packing or are packed.

Isn't it?
I always pack about one hour before the plane is due to leave. During a period in my life when I seemed to be commuting from New York to the area many grey hairs were added to my mother's head because she was certain that I was going to miss the return flight.

Surprisingly enough I never missed the flight and even more surprising I never forgot anything.

In fact one Sunday after Christmas I managed to gather all the clothes, presents, home-baked goods, etc. and get it all in the right suitcase while a sister packed similar items for her family to return to northern Michigan. —Nothing got mixed up and it is one of the few times that my sister hasn't left something behind.

Maybe the point is that organization in this matter just doesn't pay.

Some organization helps — of course. Planning ahead on what you want to take so that it will be washed and ironed is nice. However, that never seems to work either as the night before I'm due to leave I'm usually washing and ironing before I can start to pack.

If this column seems pointless perhaps it is.

However, it leads into the fact that for the next few weeks — four issues to be exact — Impressions will not appear.

The columnist is fleeing the cares and pressures of the newspaper business and will spend the time hunting up lost relatives in Ireland and observing the means and mores of life in the British Isles.

There is only one problem. During those four weeks the managing editor just might find something more worthwhile to put in the space. Then what would I do?

However, will not worry about that. Had better spend the time starting on the basics of organization for packing and see if just once I don't have to iron before filling the suitcase.

Am certain though that I will still be rushing at the last minute to catch that plane before it leaves Metropolitan.

Won't forget anything either — but then there is always a first time for everything.

Police Nab Three Youths

Robert Doodman, chief of police in the City of Farmington, announced last week that the department had apprehended three youths in connection with a series of breaking and enterings committed over the summer.

Two of the youths are juveniles and were turned over to the juvenile authorities. Police withheld the name of the third person arrested.

Deadman said that the youths were arrested in connection with burglaries at the White House Valet, Cloverdale School, the Junior High School, Longacre School and the Gill Rd. School.

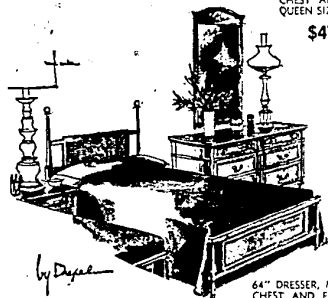

Police said Brice Frank, 43, of 33318 Grand River, evidently shot himself following a family argument during the early evening hours.

Campers Learn About Hawaii Lore

By AMY CHARRON
474-0713

Parents of Farmington Girl Scouts who attended Day Camp Arapahoe have had a fast course in Hawaii, the newest state in the union.

Campers returned from the session in early August filled with information about grass skirts, luau, and with a repertoire of Hawaiian songs.

Mrs. Roy lies, camp director, decided on a new theme this year from the traditional subject matter of Indian lore and life.

A total of 137 children attended the sessions at the Warren's Woods at Haggerty and 12 Mile Rd. More than 100 parents visited the encampment during the second week on the annual Visitors Day.

A highlight of the camp was the Hawaiian Luau complete with poi, beanitos, surbards and wai-mellon. Special guests at this event were Mr. and Mrs. Ray Warren, owners of the campsite.
