Jaycees Award Club Honors

BY JOHN BAILEY

The Farmington Jaycees and Auxiliary held their annual awards dinner Saturday night at the American Legion Hall.

Awards were given to local club members for demonstrating enthusiasm and hard work for the community and for the Jaycee family.

Jaycee President Pat Nowak and Sally Witt, Auxiliary President, made the presentations which included Spoke and Spark, special certificates of merit, outstanding project chairman, as well as Special Presidential Awards.

SPECIAL JAYCEE awards were given to the Spoke of the year, which is the outstanding first year Jaycee, and Spark of the year, given to the outstanding Spark. John Hay received the Spoke award, and Harlan Lorenz won the Spark award.

In presenting the Key Man award, president Nowak said that it was impossible to choose just one man. He said that Roy Kennedy and Chuck Williams did such an exemplary job that both had to receive the honor.

The final presentation of the evening was the Jaycee of the Year Award. This honor was given to Ralph Parin.

General Filters, Inc. Marks 'Pearl Jubilee'

"Consistency is a pearl of great value," goes the old saying. As the precious stone associated with 30th anniversaries, the pearl aptly symbolizes the constant progress made since 1936 by General Filters, Inc., Novi, Michigan.

A leading manufacturer of filters, humidifiers and related products for industrial and residential use, the company is celebrating its 30th birthday observance with an expansion program for its research and engineering facilities.

According to Mrs. Grace Redner, president, this latest addition marks the sixth such expansion since the company's founding in 1937.

Coinciding with the company's pearl jubilee, its Canadian affiliate, Canadian General Filters Limited, Scarborough, Ont., is now marking 20 years of successful operation in its own right.

During World War II, General Filters Inc. became a principal supplier of filters for military aircraft applications.

Today's products, which include a line of domestic residential humidifiers, are marketed throughout the United States and Canada through a

Letters to The Editor

(Editor's Note: The following letter is reprinted by permission of The Birmingham Eccentric and the writer, Mrs. Elizabeth Saylor.)

To the Editor,

Your recent reprint of the guest editorial entitled "I Am A Tired American," by Alan McIntosh, publisher, The Star Herald, Livonia, Mich., inspired me to put down on paper some thoughts I have been harboring for quite some time.

I hope this isn't considered plagiarism, but it did provide a vehicle for me. I thought that some of your readers might be interested (at least the female sector).

I am a tired American woman!

I am tired of being called the worst of the world's women.

I am tired of everyone who takes pen in hand becoming an authority on how I should behave, look and feel.

I AM tired of being told to go back to my home, husband and children and be satisfied with cooking, shopping and cleaning — then told that I dominate my husband, mollycoddle my children and control the pursestrings of the family.

I am tired of being told to get out of the house, go to work and become fulfilled — then told that I neglect my children, have lost my femininity and am competing with instead of complementing men.

I am tired of being told I'm beautiful, but cold; that the French woman is more charming and gay, the Italian woman is more gentle and home loving, the English woman is more sexy and understanding and the Japanese woman well — she is just more everything — she bows to, waits on and lives only for her man.

I HAVE been psychoanalyzed, basted, desecrated, maligned, dictated to and torn apart from the tip of my bouffant hairdo to the bottom of my pointed-toe shoes by every conceivable "expert" in the world.

I am the bane of my teenager's existence.

I am the bane of my husband's existence.

I am the bane of the world's existence.

I am tired of being told I'm overly pampered, unappreciative of my material advantages, unable to cook a decent meal, too loose with time and money spent on my physical appearance, too concerned with having a skinny model type figure, selfish, lazy, overbearing, greedy and sexless.

I AM A tired American woman!

Yet somehow, in spite of all my faults, shortcomings, and problems, as I stop and take a good, long look at my husband, our children, our town and our country, I cease being weary and gain strength.

I am proud to be an American, and most delighted that I am a woman!
