Older House Often Is Better Choice

Big, healthy trees are nice to have around your home, not only because of the natural beauty they lend to the landscape but also because they help to prevent soil erosion.

However, they can create a real problem when their thirsty roots get into your underground pipe.

Tree roots are extremely strong because they have a deep instinct to live and grow. They spread in all directions, seeking out life-giving moisture.

If there's a leak or a break in your underground pipe, they will find it. Then, before you know it, your pipe becomes clogged, requiring corrective measures.

The most effective way of dealing with the problem calls for the tools and services of a plumbing contractor. He'll use a special flexible auger that can be reeled into the pipe, cutting away all growth. This definitely is not a job for an amateur, since improper use of the auger can break the pipe and worsen the problem.

Special root solvents also can be flushed through the line to clear it.

These correctives measures are only temporary, however, since the thirsty roots soon will find their way back into the pipe. The only sure way to avoid a root problem is to make certain the pipe is of top-quality, water-tight material.

Strong as tree roots are, they can't break into good-quality pipe, when it comes to your pipeline, quality does not cost, it pays!

Chrysler Sales Show Climb In November

Retail sales of Chrysler Corporation passenger cars in the final 10-day sales period of November were 45,643 units, a daily rate of 3,706 units.

The volume of retail sales was up 18 per cent over the 37,171 units sold in the same period last year and the daily rate of sales was up one per cent over the 5,639 rate last year. There were eight selling days in the period this year and seven last year.

Retail sales for the month of November were 119,928 units, two per cent under the 122,847 units for November last year.

usually weatherproof with household goods hiding inside a completely closed and sealed van. And special packing and handling techniques protect the family's belongings during loading and unloading.

Trained movers make use of cloth runners throughout the house when loading and unloading so that furnishings can be handled without tracking mud and snow on rugs and floors.

A major reason for the recent increase in wintertime moving, Mayflower noted, is the sharp rise in the number of business transfers. Personnel transfers have become commonplace with the growth of industry and commerce throughout the country and these transfers occur throughout the year.

Moving In Winter No Longer Need Cause You To Worry

If you are planning a move to a distant city this winter, you no longer have to look forward to moving day with apprehension. Long-distance household moving has become a safe year-round service, often more convenient in the winter than during the summer.

With a great deal less traffic on the highways and with modern express vans stretching from coast to coast, the large cross-country moving vans are no longer at a disadvantage in winter months. Actually, the combination of modern highways and advanced equipment make it easier for van lines to maintain moving service, according to Aero Mayflower Transit company, leading long-distance mover.

New Homes Have Problems, Too

All of the preparations for a move needn't be confined to the old residence.

If possible, suggest the moving experts of Aero Mayflower Transit Company, try to get things ready in your new residence before the movers arrive with your furniture.

For example, you could put up picture hooks so that when the movers bring in your prized paintings and pictures they can be mounted on the wall instead of set off to the side where they could be damaged.
