Area Students Learn to Teach By Experience

More than 825 Western Michigan University students in the education curriculum, including many from the areas served by the Observer Newspaper Group, currently are learning the practical aspects of their future profession.

The students, who plan to become classroom teachers, are spending the semester doing their directed teaching in schools throughout the state. During the period, the WMU student-teachers will learn good teaching methods under experienced educators.

The largest number of students—516—plan to become secondary school teachers. The next largest group consists of 245 who plan to teach in elementary grades. Others include 45 in special education and 21 in speech correction.

WMU students from the Observer Newspaper circulation area and the schools to which they are listed include:

GARDEN CITY: Joyce Carpenter, Brooks Junior High; Detroit: G. Lynn Erdmann, Battle Creek Central High.

LIVONIA: Darleen Bowden, Portage Amherst Elementary; Ronald Klassen, Plainville Community Schools; Marilyn Kotch, Livonia Franklin High; Mary Preston, Dearborn Public School, secondary education; Ralph Va-

St. Valentine Students Join In Science Fair

With students from the first through the eighth grades showing interest, more than 400 projects are expected to be displayed in the annual Science Fair of St. Valentine School, Sunday in the Church Hall from 2 to 5 p.m.

St. Valentine Church and School is located on Beech Road in Redford Township, just south of Five Mile Road, at Hope Street.

All exhibits will be eligible for trophies and ribbons in the judging, according to Sponsor Mrs. Marian Wilkie, who is eighth grade science teacher. But only those from the seventh and eighth grades will be entered in the regional and final competitions at Cobo Hall.

The fair is free of charge to the general public and all parents are urged to attend and view the exhibits of their children as well as those of other students at all grade levels.
