

Schoolcraft Slates Summer Music School & Festival

A four-week Summer Music School and Festival from July 3 through 28 has been announced by Wayne Dunlap, director of music at Schoolcraft College.

The school will provide instruction in chamber music and orchestral literature to advanced high school and early college students, Dunlap said. College credit is available to those who wish it.

The festival will provide a series of weekly concerts on Wednesday and Friday nights. The Wednesday evening Court Concerts will be performed by the Court Orchestra composed of faculty members augmented by other professional musicians. Friday night concerts will be performed by the student orchestra, Music of Haydn and Hindemith will be featured. Soloists for the Court Concerts will be William, Doppman, pianist, July 3; Leslie Eitzen, mezzo-soprano, July 12; the Kenneth Jewell Chorale, July 19; and Paul Doktor, violinist, July 26.

The school faculty includes a number of members of the Detroit Symphony. Faculty members are: Emily Mutter Austin, violin, member of the Detroit Symphony, and concert master of the Plymouth Symphony and the Community Center Symphony; Inez Jullinger Redman, violin, concert master of the Grosse Pointe Symphony;

The school is designed for advanced musicians of high school and early college age who are performers on strings, woodwinds, brass and piano, Dunlap explained.

"Particular attention will be given to contemporary music idioms and techniques of ensemble playing," the director said. "In addition to instrumental work, all students will participate in musicianship classes designed for performing musicians. "All students applying for the school must have the recommendation of a music teacher. Maximum participation and instructional attention will be assured each student," Dunlap said.

Registration for the school is scheduled for June 26 and 27, from 9 a.m. to noon in the college library, but students must indicate by June 15 their intention to enroll, Dunlap said. Tuition is $40 for the four-week school.

Meadowbrook Sets 1967 Concert Season

Oakland University's sparkling hit, the Meadow Brook Music Festival, bears real promise of topping its own remarkable record for quality and excitement in the summer ahead.

Plans of the 1967 event, June through August 20, call for a "new look" eight-week season available to subscribers in two four-week programs, a roster of soloists, guest conductors, and repertoire of a stature presented on one series.

Sixteen Ehring will conduct the Detroit Symphony Orchestra in 25 of the 32 scheduled concerts. Four concerts each will be conducted by Charles Munch, former Boston Symphony director, and Hiroyuki Iwaki, noted Japanese conductor appearing for the first time in the United States in a guest role. Robert Shaw, head of the Meadow Brook School of Music choral and orchestral programs, will appear on the program for two performances.

All performances will be in the Howard C. Baldwin Memorial Pavilion. Concerts will be presented Thursdays, with Allen Chase the soloist.

Instrumental soloists will include pianists Vladimir Ashkenazy, Van Cliburn, Misha Dichter, and Nicole Henriot-Schweitzer; violinists James Oliver Buswell IV, Itzhak Perlman, and Gordon Staples; Allen Chase, trombone; and Arthur Krehbiel, French horn.

Vocal soloists will include Jane Marsh, soprano, and Jan Peerce, tenor. Choral soloists include Janice Harsanyi, soprano; Florence Kopell, contralto; John McMillan, and Jon Humphrey, tenors; Yi-Kwei Sze and Thomas Paul, basses.

The festival committee has commissioned Ernst Krenek to write a major orchestral work tentatively titled "Horizon Cirkled" for premiere Aug. 12-13. Eugene Zador's Trombone Concerto will be premiered July 20-21.

Patrons of the festival will be presented Thursdays, with Allen Chase the soloist.
