Cross-Breeding Of Roses Done Very Carefully

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of two articles on the author's all-time favorite flower, the rose.)

By BETTY FRANKEL
Special Writer

June is the month of roses. Their lush, fragrant blooms are growing everywhere. Since earliest times roses have been the favorite flower. They were one of the first flowers to be domesticated, and their praises have been sung by poets of all ages. Roses are described in the literature of the ancient Greeks, and Roman maidens arranged roses for flower shows.

Roses grow wild in all parts of the Northern Hemisphere, and there are about 100 wild species of roses. These are upright or climbing shrubs that have single flowers and leaves divided into numerous leaflets.

IN NATURE, the cross-breeding is a haphazard process, but it is a carefully controlled process when done by rose breeders.

All of the cultivated garden hybrids were developed by crossing and re-crossing, and over the years many strange and lovely roses have been developed.

Cultivated roses probably originated from Rosa gallica, a native of central and southern Europe. The cabbage rose, Rosa centifolia was also used in early hybridization.

Later roses from India, China, and Japan were used also.

The Damask roses were brought to Europe from its native Damascus and Syria by the early crusaders.

ROSA MOSCHATA, the Musk rose, and Rosa odorata, the original tea rose are not hardy in this part of the country but are of interest because they figured prominently in the crosses that give rise to tea roses and then to Hybrid tea roses.

These latter flowers, with their large, beautifully formed individual blooms, are the most popular of all roses. There is a wide range of color and many are fragrant. New varieties are introduced each year and many gardeners "collect" Hybrid tea roses.

"Peace", a blend of pale yellow edged with pink, is undoubtedly the most popular rose at the present time. It has beautiful glossy deep green foliage and is relatively disease resistant.

Floribundas resulted from a cross between Hybrid Teas and dwarf polyanthas. They are becoming more popular because they are hardy and relatively resistant to disease, and flower freely all summer.

The flowers, born in clusters, are somewhat smaller than tea roses and have a less elegant form. They grow into bushy plants that make good landscape material. Among the more popular floribundas are fashion, coral, Spartan, red-orange, and White Bouquet.

Within recent years a new type of rose, the Grandiflora, was developed by crossing Hybrid Teas and Floribundas. Large flowers are born on bushy plants.

Telephone Group Praised For Book Machine Project

Members of the Fort Council of the Telephone Pioneers of America have been honored for their work in repairing and improving talking book machines for use by blind persons.

Telephone Pioneers of America is an organization open to men and women who have spent more than 21 years in the telephone industry. The Fort Council of the Pioneers includes members in Plymouth, Livonia, Farmington and other suburbs.

A current project of the local council is conversion of the talking book machines so that they will play at the speed of 9 1/2 rpm. The machines play only at speeds of 16 2/3 and 33 1/3 rpm without the converted motor. A talking book machine is a specially designed record player.

John Jergovich, of Livonia, who is in charge of the talking book machine program, accepted a certificate of appreciation from the Library of Congress. The award was presented at a meeting of the Fort Council executive committee.

The Telephone Pioneers are involved in several community service projects which aid the blind or other handicapped persons.

Some of these projects are: reproducing Braille material for textbooks, illustration of Braille texts, recording books and repairing tape recorders for blind students, making therapeutic aids for handicapped children and participating in parties for handicapped children.
