

Pickets Do-it To-it

Historic Botsford Inn found itself the focal point of a 1967-style demonstration last Thursday.

The protesters were members of the National Prohibition Party who were having their presidential convention at the Northwest YMCA down the street. They took up picket positions during the afternoon.

The picketing was organized as a police protest to a Botsford guest, who said he thought prohibition went out 30 years ago. This remark was made to a woman party delegate at a dinner the Prohibitionists had at Botsford. When she was asked if she would like a cocktail, the lady had stated her party affiliation in no certain terms, causing the guest to doubt whether prohibition had really been repealed.

The picketers were invited into the Inn for coffee after they had demonstrated by Inn manager, Mrs. Robert Martin. They refused, but kept it friendly.

John Anhalt, Botsford owner, said about the protest, "We were just the handiest place. I told them they could do it in good order. After all, it's a free country."

Co-Op Owners Like Investments

in a different state and Cheny is not sure how long he will be based in Michigan.

He came here ahead of his family to scout real estate and decided home prices were "outrageous."

He decided he'd get more living space in a better section of town for what he would pay in a co-op.

Also, he thought Mrs. Cheny would have more opportunity to make friends and have more activities to enjoy in a co-op rather than an apartment.

Both the Devlins and Chenys have pet dogs, something they couldn't have in an apartment.

Mrs. Clara Heenan, a widow, has a one-bedroom apartment purchased before her husband died and she made the decision to live in it alone rather than live with her children.

"I wouldn't live in a house alone," she says, "and an apartment is so secluded."

Herman Schmidt is a retiree and lives in a three-bedroom unit with his wife. He longer wanted the responsibility of a large home but wanted enough room for his grandchildren to visit him and also enough room for a workshop.

He has one in the basement, a gain something he couldn't have in an apartment.

The John Todds are a young couple who moved here from Flint. They previously had always lived in an apartment and feel a co-op is a step toward owning a home.

Another resident is Mrs. Anne Hollingsworth, a widow with a college age daughter, Carole, who will be attending Eastern Michigan University in February.

As a working woman, Mrs. Hollingsworth finds a co-op easier to maintain. And when her daughter goes away to school she feels she will find more companionship in Farmington Village than she would have in an apartment.

The list of reasons for cooperative living could go on and on, but primary among them seems to be pride of ownership, community stability, no lease "tiedown" and tax benefits.

Fluoridated Water Set To Start Aug. 1

Fluoridated water will start flowing in City and Township lines beginning Aug. 1.

Anyone now getting Detroit water will receive the fluoride, which, according to health experts, reduces tooth decay. The fluoride does not change the taste of water. The only local exceptions are people in the Township served by their own private fresh water wells.

Gerald J. Reiss, general manager of the Detroit Water Supply Department, said a new $550,000 chemical facility at Water Works Park is expected to be finished by late July.

Named As Secretary

Bill Kloote has been named as the executive secretary of the Farmington Education Association effective July 1.

Kloote will serve the FEA on a half-time basis with the other half of his salary being paid by the West Bloomfield Education Association.

A resident of Plymouth, Kloote has taught math and science at Plymouth's Junior High School for the past three years. Prior to that time he was a teacher in the Livonia School System.

A graduate of Hope College in Holland, Mich., Kloote holds a masters from Eastern Michigan University and he has attended the University of Michigan.

While teaching in Plymouth, Kloote was one of the board negotiators for the Plymouth Education Association in the 1965-1967 contract negotiations with the Board of Education.

Kloote terms his new position as an opportunity for leadership and stresses that in teacher-board negotiations both sides are working together for the benefit of the youngsters and of the community.

It's that time of the year where you will be making ice cubes by the ton for Kool-Aid, lemonade, to keep the watermelon cold for the picnic, etc. You'll probably try everything possible to make those ice cubes nice and clear and they still come out looking like you added powdered sugar to them.

From a reliable source comes the information that the cloudiness cannot be eliminated at home because of the technical processing involved, where all the minerals dissolved in the water must be removed. After the minerals are eliminated, then the water is kept in constant motion at certain temperatures while the freezing takes place.

So, you'll have to be happy with the cloudy ice cubes and believe me that lemonade sure tastes good on a hot day, even with a cloudy ice cube.
