

JUST AS IT WILL this year, an old-fashioned square dance rounded out activities at last year's festival. These couples were caught whirling away in the Downtown Shopping Center.

Food Market Is A Modern 'General Store'

In some food markets, as much as 102 feet of shelf space is taken by soaps and detergents, with as much as 139 feet for other household supplies—bleach, starch, mops, and brooms, etc., totaling 241 feet of shelf space for these items. Paper products add an additional 114 feet. Paper towels, plates, and cups are some of the largest selling items. As a comparison, shelf space for some important food groups shows canned vegetables take about 112 feet and cereals about 78 feet.

I-96 Was Originally Territorial Highway

I-96, the federally-sponsored superhighway connecting Farmington to Detroit, Lansing and Grand Rapids, was originally a territorial road, according to historians.

It was one of three that crossed Michigan from east to west in its early years.

The first, the federally-built Chicago Military Road, followed what is now US-12 from Detroit to Ypsilanti and then through the southern tier of counties to Coldwater, Sturgis, Niles, New Buffalo and Chicago.

THE SECOND, sponsored by the Michigan Territorial Council, branched off the military road in Ypsilanti and then went through the second tier of counties to Ann Arbor, Jackson, Battle Creek, Kalamazoo and St. Joseph. It was called the Territorial Road; its route is now approximated by I-94.

The third westward route was Grand River, also a territorial project.

Dr. Willis Dumber's book "Michigan: A History of the Wolverine State," describes the territorial roads as in much poorer shape than the federal military road.
