Farmington Man Takes High Catholic Education Position

A Farmington father of seven has been named to one of the top educational posts in the Detroit Archdiocese of the Roman Catholic Church. Jerry E. Delaney's position is administrative assistant to the director of the Archdiocesan Office of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine.

"The CCD office," he said, "is in charge of all Christian education outside of the Catholic day schools."

This includes catechism classes for children who attend public schools, high school catechism, pre-school religious training and adult education.

"The number of children in catechism classes is very high," Delaney said. "Especially in the suburbs, the population growth has been too fast for Catholic schools to keep up with."

"In more and more parishes, the children attend public schools and catechism classes."

Delaney's appointment was announced by Father Robert S. Humits, director of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine office.

"Our aim," Father Humits said, "is to free the director as much as possible from the time-consuming details of office procedure and administration of programs."

"This will allow us to fully concentrate on developing solid teacher training programs, design in-service requirements for full certification of teachers and work closely with curriculum planning and development."

"Delaney has the unique combination of special training and years of experience in both office personnel management and catechetics and should, therefore, be of great help in the future plans and programs of the CCD office."

Delaney, a member of Our Lady of Sorrows Church, began teaching catechism at his church several years ago, and later

Missionaries from India, Rev. and Mrs. William Pease, will visit the Elmwood Church of the Nazarene, 4149 N. Wayne Road, Westland, at its 11 a.m. Sunday service.

The church's pastor, Rev. T.C. Riddle, who will preach the 7:30 a.m. service, said that the Peases are on a one-year furlough and will spend part of that time doing deputation work in Michigan. The balance of the year will be spent in Texas.

Rev. and Mrs. Pease have been assigned to India for the past 13 years where the reverend served as Mission School Principal in Chikhi and field treasurer.

Rev. Pease, a native of Alberta, Canada, received his bachelor of theology degree from the Canadian Nazarene College in Red Deer, Alberta. He then served as pastor of the Church of the Nazarene in Alberta and district treasurer in Calgary, in the same province, before being assigned to India.

Rev. Riddle also announced that the Nazarene Church organization will accept a Thanksgiving offering for missions this Sunday with the goal set at $2 million.
