Balloting Begins In Synod

The Archdiocese of Detroit takes another step forward in its unprecedented Synod program Sunday when Roman Catholic parishes begin balloting on the various proposals that have come out of the study.

Balloting will take place in all parishes participating in the synod Dec. 10, Dec. 17 and Jan. 7.

Each participating church will put before its members on the three Sundays the proposals worked out by Synod study groups in nine separate areas of church affairs.

THUS, EVERY Roman Catholic will have a chance to gain close knowledge of the proposals and express his opinion in all areas.

The results of the voting, together with the proposals themselves, will go to the archdiocese for its Synod 1968. The program, put into effect at the invitation of Archbishop John F. Dearden, marks the first time that lay members of the churches have worked along with the clergy in charting future plans for a large archdiocese.

IN PREVIOUS Synods, only a few representatives of the clergy added the bishops in setting programs.

This time, representatives of both laity and clergy formed study groups on the nine designated topics—the laity, community affairs, administration, ecumenism, missions, worship, clergy, the religious orders, and education.

Each study group in each church was free to develop its own proposals in the various areas.

INCLUDED IN THE program were "Speak Up" sessions, in which parish communities met in groups of about 15 to consider proposals.

The parish participation plan was titled "Seeking Progress Together."

It began Sept. 17, and for three weeks the stage was set with special programs televised over the Archdiocesan Channel.

8 and 10 and the Detroit Education Channel 58.

After that the individual study groups got under way.

VARIOUS PARISHES in the area will vote on varying proposals, since each parish will consider only the ideas put forth in its own confines.

The archdiocese covers eight counties in Lower Michigan, with about 350 parishes. About 90 per cent of these, including about 125,000 Roman Catholics, participated in the preparation and will join in the balloting.
