

GRAND GARDENS SUBDIVISION

AT CLARENCEVILLE

The new plat is now on sale and from all appearances will soon be all closed out as there is nothing along the Grand River road to compare with it in location, quality of soil or general desirability for a home site.

Directly on the car line and the new cement road, with stores, school and churches close at hand and located in a desirable neighborhood it has no equal as a place for a home.

These lots are cut into

ACRES AND HALF ACRES

and the initial price is so low that they ought to be snapped up quickly. The price will be advanced as the lots are sold and it is advisable to make an early selection on that account. Prices range from

$250 TO $400

and the terms are made easy. $50 gets a contract when the balance can be paid monthly as the buyer desires. A $10 deposit will secure your choice of lot and when $50 is paid the contract is issued.

Don't make the usual mistake of neglecting this opportunity until the prices advance. Pick your lot now and get the benefit of the advance which is sure to come in a very short time. As an this chance is unequalled for these lots will double in value within two years.

Salesmen are at work on this subdivision in Detroit, but people in this locality can make first choice by making early application.

Salesmen will be on the ground Sundays, but plats can be seen at the Enterprise office in Farmington or the Record office in Redford on any day. All information can be had at either place of

"A Modern Girl"—Garrick Theatre

"A Modern Girl," a new play dealing with conditions synonymous of its title, will be brought to the Garrick Theatre, Detroit, next week. The piece has just closed an engagement at the Cort Theatre, Chicago, and boasts of an unusual cast.

Ruth Mitchell is responsible for this latest dramatic effusion which deals with a girl of modern ideas. Miss Mitchell is endeavoring to bring out the fact that the girl of today is not a namby pamby, a follower, but one of original and individual ideas, who dares to follow the bent of her thought irrespective of the iron bound conventionalities of criticism and thought. The central figure of "A Modern Girl" is an attractive and entirely plausible young woman. She is of a positive and experimental type. She finds out that her father has borrowed a large sum of money from a bachelor, a man with "zone too" fragrant a past. She clads herself in a gown conspicuous by its daring and lack of concealing quality and goes to the apartment of the bachelor. Of course the father hears of it and can only give the one interpretation, but the girl succeeds in convincing him that she has been honorable, that the bachelor is not so bad as he is painted, and the bachelor in turn develops a sentimental vein and becomes the true lover of the girl.

The play does not harp on the new order of things—rather it is a strong and gripping dramatic story with many sane and interesting lines. It tells us the truth about our foibles and modern tendencies. A strong cast has been provided. Olive Wyndham will be seen as a modern girl, while Jos. Kilgour will be found quite at home as the bachelor and Charles Stevenson as skilful in another of his many characterizations of dignified age. The piece was staged under the direction of Tully Marshall.

Washington Theatre—Detroit

For the week of Dec. 15, a most interesting double bill is announced by the Washington Players at the Washington Theatre, Detroit. This bill will consist of a novelty no less gripping and sensational than George Seibel's powerful drama, "The Leper." This novelty is "The Eternal Mystery," a new drama by Geo. Jean Nathan, dramatic editor of Smart Set in New York City. The piece was recently turned down by the board of directors of the Princess Theatre in New York for fear its frank argument might shock squeamish playgoers. Recently, however, it was produced in Pittsburgh at the new Pitt Theatre and there it caused a tremendous sensation. "The Eternal Mystery" is as startling as it is original. The play has been bitterly denounced because of its frank discussion of certain defects in the teachings of Christian religion. The story concerns a dying consumptive, who in the final moments of his agony bitterly denounces God and all pertaining thereto. His wife, who kneels beside him, prays for a miracle which will reveal the Divine Master and convert her husband. At this juncture Mr. Nathan introduces a miracle which provides a powerful climax for the play.

"The Eternal Mystery" will be followed by a new comedy called "Don," the work of Rudolph Besier. This highly amusing satirical comedy was the greatest success at the New Theatre in New York during its first season.

NOT SERIOUS.

"You have forgotten yourself," said the maid, haughtily.

"Have I?" said the man, meekly.

"I'm so glad it wasn't my umbrella."

SURE TIP.

"I am sure that Grabit has an itching palm."

"Then you may depend upon it, he isn't scratching for a living."

REMEDY.

Mr. Growler—"There is entirely too much hot air in this house."

Mrs. Growler—"Then, why don't you quit talking?"

USUAL PROCEED.

"What possessed you to cut up the pony ballet in the musical show?"

"Isn't it the right thing to carve broilers?"

FAR, FAR FROM HERE.

"There goes the man who put this town on the map."

"He doesn't look like a politician and I'm sure he's not a baseball pitcher. What did he ever do to put this town on the map?"

"He demonstrated to a learned body of men that it is possible to live on ten cents a day."

"Where?"

"In Tahiti, I think."

SHE DIDN'T CARE.

"Our club for entertaining literary lions is finally ready. Now what literary lion shall we entertain first?"

"The president was all tired out from selecting a hat. 'I don't care,' she said wearily. 'Anybody who doesn't eat with his knife.'"

RACIAL EXPRESSION IN MUSIC

All Characteristics Have Been Shown by the Works of the Great Masters of Melody.

We can learn something of a man's character by observing his walk. The sailor's gait tells its own story; so does the tread of the plowman. The movement of music is equally significant. Every race has some rhythm which it prefers to others. When the composer thinks of classic Italy, his muse may fittingly choose the lilt of the Pastoral, the measure to which it is not unphilosophic to imagine the Sicilian shepherds dancing while the chorists ruminated on his idyls. Nor has it perished with the years. Bach and Handel loved it. "When we are not moved to tears by 'He shall feed his flock,' or uplifted heaven-high by the shepherd's music from the Christmas Oratorio, our thanks are due not only to the composers, but to the rustic of Italy who enriched music with this beautiful rhythm. How different is the merry-making in the Pastoral Symphony. Here the humor is robust, uproarious even; the Austrian peasants have no aversion to getting tipsy. The change is not merely one of scene, but of temperament. Beethoven loved to watch the villagers at their revels and, like Goethe, he has left us a picture of the Tivoli in holiday humor that men will relish as long as they live art. Here the dance is a waltz, frolicked with a bacchanalian zest. Mozart's German dance as though they wanted to be Italians. His minuetts are own scenes to the measures of Padre Martini. Occasionally, however, when the grace of God is stronger than the fashion of the day, he slips into a 'Tivoli mood.'—Rodern Mason, in the Atlantic.
