

License Numbers Confusing

LANSING -- Check cashing businesses and banking agencies which use the Michigan driver license as official identification should make sure they put down the person's license number and not the accounting number which also appears prominently on the new color-photo licenses.

The meaningful number for identification purposes is the one letter, 12-digit number which appears at the top left of the new licenses," explains Secretary of State James M. Hare.

A driver's record and other pertinent data is centered about this number.

"Apparently, some check-cashing businesses and banking institutions have mistakenly used the number which appears at the lower left of each new license. This is an internal accounting number used by the Michigan Department of State for distribution purposes. But because it is large and in red, it stands out and could be miscontrued as the license number," Hare noted.

The old style licenses do not present any problems because there is no accounting number on them, he said.

Ford Motor Expands Rouge Plant Tours

Ford Motor Company has begun offering more extensive tours of its auto assembly and steel operations in the world-famous Ford Rouge plant.

For the first time, Rouge tours will include final inspection as well as the assembly of new Ford Mustangs and Mercury Cougars.

Tours also have been extended to include the Rouge steel mills and metal stamping operations. Tours of Ford Motor Company computer operations also are offered by appointment. Large groups are asked to make advance reservations for Rouge tours.

Announces Scholarship

For the third successive year, the Ford Motor Company Fund is sponsoring a competition for automotive technology scholarships among children of more than 170,000 employees of Ford and Lincoln-Mercury dealerships.

Approximately 100 scholarships will be awarded for two years of study at qualified junior colleges and technical institutes selected by the winners.

The scholarships pay full tuition and provide an annual stipend toward room and board of $300 for students living at home and $750 for those living away from home. The fund also makes an annual contribution of $250 to the general education budgets of the institutions for each scholarship student in attendance.

Candidates must be graduated from a high school between September 1, 1965 and August 31, 1968, or must have been discharged or scheduled for discharge from active military service between September 1, 1966, and August 31, 1968. In the latter case, they may have graduated at any time. Applications must be submitted by April 1, 1968.

'Sexual Attitudes Shifting Rapidly'--Psychiatrist

ANN ARBOR -- Attitudes about sexuality are changing rapidly, and tomorrow's physician will have to be much more involved than today's in family planning, says a University of Michigan psychiatrist.

Dr. Stuart M. Finch, professor of psychiatry and chief of U-M's Children's Psychiatric Hospital, sees adults struggling with both old and new attitudes about sex.

"Sex has been looked upon as a necessary evil by a large proportion of our population almost since the beginning of our country's history," he observes. "To think that we can change such attitudes in the space of a few years is ridiculous."

pressure, but if they are emotionally mature they can make the right decisions," the psychiatrist said. "Sexual activity for the immature person will be somewhat distorted. The mature person, on the other hand, may be able to handle the sexual and procreative side of his life reasonably well even though it does not conform to some of his culture's standards."

"FOR EXAMPLE, there is great pressure on many young girls in our society today to be promiscuous," Dr. Finch says. "Those who are mature and whose psychological growth has been adequate will probably resist this group pressure and behave in a socially acceptable fashion."

"For those who are immature, such pressures only aid and abet the already present tendency of the adolescent to act out."

"All physicians, including psychiatrists, will have to become much more aware of social and cultural influences. "The world today is in an obvious period of transition, particularly in regard to sexuality. Nowhere is this more true than in our own country. One can only speculate on the contrast between the sexual attitudes and behavior of 40 years ago, and that of 40 years hence. Much has changed in the past 40 years, and certainly an equal amount of change will take place in the next 40 years."

DR. FINCH SAID that 40 years ago little if any sex education was provided to youngsters, either in the home, church, or school.

"Not infrequently, for instance, they were taught that masturbation was wicked and harmful. Today we are reaching literally millions of youngsters with some type of sex education, and it is relatively rare to hear masturbation condemned," he said.

Nevertheless, the adults who are involved in sex education are products of the earlier generation. "They are still struggling with many of their own emotional roadblocks to a comfortable discussion of sex." An example of our current paradoxical sex attitudes is that "while we provide sex information to many youngsters both in schools and churches, we still deny it or at least give short shrift to it for many of those youngsters from low-economic levels who might need it most. They, after all, are apt to get less from their parents than our middle-class youngsters."

"And the same holds true for general family planning advice to teenagers," says Dr. Finch.
