Jutta Umland's Menu Now Features Brownies, Tuna

Sauserknack and knackwurst may be what she eats at home in Stade, Germany, but Jutta Umland has developed a fondness for brownies and tuna fish casserole the way Mrs. Charles Lindquist, her American "mother," cooks them.

Since arriving here last August, the Youth For Understanding exchange student has learned about many things American besides brownies and likes all of them better than she liked things in England which she visited a year ago. "England was nice to see," Jutta explains, "but it's all gray and the people are not open to you. But then I was in a big group and here I'm in a family."

On Jutta's visit to England she was with a group of counselors with whom she worked at a summer camp in Denmark.

THE LINQUIST home at 32125 Hearthstone is some distance from North Farmington High but Jo, as the Lindquists call her, enjoys the hike to school.

She also likes to shovel snow, which astounds her "sister," Karen Lindquist. "It replaces walking," says Jo. "Americans don't walk—I like to get out and exercise." Although she is a senior at NFH, the 16-year-old miss has three years of school ahead of her when she returns to Stade. German youth attend school for 13 years before going on to college.

Karen, at 17 years of age, has already made up her mind to major in theater arts in college and is just waiting for word on various entrance applications.

Jo grins and says, "I still have time." She will be 19 when she graduates.

The German girl shows a practical turn of mind with her choice of economics as a major study.

"It isn't a dying profession, it has a future and there's money in it," is her comment.

JO'S HOME in Stade is some five hours distant from Berlin and its Wall, but she has seen the border dividing East-West Germany all through her homeland.

With a grim face she says, "You bet there's more than a fence. It looks like a fence but behind that fence there are feet and feet of land mines and towers of East German police to sit and shoot at people who try to cross."

"People who have relatives in East Germany have strong feelings about it."

"My personal feeling is that East Germany will never be free."

In addition to her intrigue with brownies and casseroles, Jo has great interest in the school clubs at NFH.

"At home," she notes, "we don't have school clubs, school teams, school spirit. The school relationship is not the same."

The Men's Association held its annual dinner in the Abbey Grille at Northland on Jan. 25. It was a disappointing turn out for so fine an affair. Following a cocktail hour a very fine dinner was served. After dinner Jim O'Brien presided.

It was decided that the Civic Affairs committee would work very closely with the Village Council on the possible changes in government that may come as a result of the study being conducted by the University of Michigan.

It was also brought out that the association anticipates 60 additional new members as the homes being built in Woodcreek Hills are occupied.

PAMELA BUSCH, who has been in Lima, Peru, with the Peace Corps for the past two years, is now on vacation. She is going to other South American countries and will visit Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro.

Beyond that her mother is not sure of her itinerary but she does know Pamela plans to go to New York City before coming home for a visit.

WOOD CREEK is in a state of suspended animation. A tremendous holiday season is in the future.

We are resting, as are our gardens, in order to be ready when life returns outside.
