Lady Of Many Interests

Probably the most entertaining part of spending an afternoon with Mrs. Robert Orians, wife of Quaker Valley Farms' president, is Mrs. Orians herself.

True, it's fascinating to see examples of her myriad hobbies, to see her fascinating house—but most fascinating of all is to see Mrs. Orians' expressive face as she talks about herself and her interests. She is given to prefacing her remarks about herself with, "I'm a nut—at least the neighbors think I am, but all these things interest me."

"All these things," cover everything from working with glass to professional touches in the decoration of her home to traveling, to gardening, to her three daughters, July, 14, Michele, 12 and Renee, nine.

TRAVELING is a natural for her because she spent her first birthday on an oceanliner going to her parents' homeland in France.

Since that time she has traveled to many places and in recent years always takes slides on each trip to bring home to her trio of daughters.

"When they can't come with us," she says, "I like to take slides so that I can bring our trip back to the children. I've shown them at all their schools."

She got more than she bargained for after one jump to show slides at Judy's school, Our Lady of Mercy. She ended up spending six hours showing them to six classes.

PERHAPS BECAUSE she likes people, this was just an ordinary way to spend some time to Mrs. Orians.

Certainly the fact that she likes people is the reason she studied to be a social worker at the University of Detroit and spent a year before she was married with Detroit's Children's Aid Society.

And certainly the fact that she likes people helps in the great amount of entertaining she does as the wife of a manufacturer's agent.

For one of these parties she tore apart her family room with its black and red color scheme and turned it into a beak-in haven.

The black and red family room shows a touch in the handling of its colors as does the pale gold and coral living room in the Orians' home. The colors in both rooms are vibrant and vivid but under complete control.

All about the family room and living room are examples of Mrs. Orians' unusual hobby of working with glass. An explanation of how she achieves her results would be too intricate— suffice to say none of the beautiful pieces look like the old beer bottles, soft drink

Hearing Set

The installation of a 12 inch water main along Drake Rd. came a step closer last Monday night when the Farmington City Council established a public hearing on the necessity of the project.

A hearing has been scheduled for 8 p.m. Monday, March 4, in the Council Chambers in the City Hall.
