Albert and Jean Kazak flew down to the British West Indies last month. About three years ago they had bought, sight unseen, a lot on Monserrat. They thought it was time to see their land holding.
They stopped at Antigua first, then went to Monserrat where they immediately fell in love with their more than half an acre with its palms, almond and mango trees, plus lots of orchids.
Jean, of course, had to visit a school there. She was appalled at the abject poverty. She plans to send a box of crayons to each of those 300 disadvantaged youngsters. They returned to Antigua and flew home from there on Feb. 29.
Sheila Holden spoke to the Faculty Wives at Wayne State University at their April meeting. Her topic, of course, was Australia.
