

Top Labor Mediator Called In Newspaper Strike

DETROIT--Dr. Nathan Feinsinger, nationally known labor mediator, has agreed to come to Detroit to discuss the city's long newspaper strike.

Dr. Feinsinger, professor of law at the University of Wisconsin, will review the situation and possibly devise a formula that might lead to an agreement between the Detroit News and the Detroit Free Press and the numerous newspaper unions.

Mayor Jerome Cavanagh, who is making arrangements for the intervention of Dr. Feinsinger, said he had not discussed with publishers or unions the visit of the Wisconsin professor but could envision no reason for objection.

LANSING--William J. Rogers, 40-year-old superintendent of schools in North Dearborn Heights, has been named superintendent of the Ingham Intermediate School District of Ingham County effective July 1. He succeeds Alton J. Stroop, who has announced plans to retire at the close of the school

LANSING--The Michigan Court of Appeals has ruled that extensive news coverage of a crime in itself does not prove that community opinion has been prejudiced against a defendant.

The decision was made on the appeal of Sidney Jenkins, who was tried and convicted in 1965 of murder and armed robbery by the Genesee County Circuit Court. Jenkins claimed that the jury was influenced by prior knowledge of the case through newspaper, radio and television coverage of the murder. The news reports implied his guilt, Jenkins argued.

WASHINGTON--Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., believes the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) has usurped the policy-making functions of Congress and is so structured that it always comes down on the side of labor.

He has called for the abolition of the NLRB and its replacement by a U.S. Labor Court patterned after the U.S. Tax Court.

BATTLE CREEK--The Kellogg Co. will spend $20 million annually for the next three years in capital replacements and expansion projects. The company spent $17 million in improvements and expansion in 1967.

PONTIAC--Sally Herrington, a five-year-old girl suffering from a rare blood disease, is living on 50 pints of blood each week. Sally was admitted to St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in September and has been receiving almost continuous blood transfusions.

A hospital spokesman said it has taken $1,200 of blood each week to keep the child alive. He said the family is about 400 to 500 pints behind in replacing or paying for the blood used.

Her doctors said they were hopeful. During the past two months, they have detected signs that the transfusions are regenerating her bone marrow.

HOWELL--A possible conflict of interest has prompted the resignation of Charles Showerman, Iosco Township supervisor. An associate real estate broker with Howell Town and Country, he explained that the countywide real estate, insurance, appraisal and building business at times serves the county as a customer or client, creating a conflict of interest.

DETROIT--The Wayne County Board of Supervisors has approved a pay increase for county employees of 7 per cent or $420, whichever is greater. General fund employees will get their raise on April 1. The boost for Road Commission workers is retroactive to Dec. 1.

ANN ARBOR--The Ann Arbor Board of Education negotiating team has rejected the latest salary proposal of the Ann Arbor Teachers Association--a $1.4 million salary and fringe benefit package.

The board reaffirmed its current proposal to the teachers. This includes $200 raises for those teachers beyond step 10 of the current salary schedule; normal yearly hikes specified in the current contract for those below step 10, fully paid health and accident insurance and continuation of the super-maximum pay plan which is a merit plan for pay increases for veteran teachers.

JACKSON--Jackson voters have approved a three-mill property tax extension, first voted on last year that authorized some $500,000 for the city. The original approval enabled the city to provide additional police and firemen.
