WIRELESS AT HARVARD.

WIRELESS AT HARVARD.

Itherward students, presumably of the Lawrence Scientific School, have organized a wireless telegraph company and are now operating five wireless stations. According to the Electrical World, the company is a commercial concern, intended to surply the wireless needs of the professors and undergraduates. But just now its officials are cheldy-occupied in testing interference eliminators. Indeed, they calm to have so far perfected their tentruments that this defect in the operation of bofflamy wireless lines is not present in the Harvard estrice. This seems rather an effective method of teaching the now schone of wireless telegraphy, which is, we take it, the real purpose of the Harvard company.

Carctaker Makes Good Profits by Digging Up Buried Bedies. Philadelphia—By removing bodies from graves and their reselling the burial places. William Lewis, the carelaker of a cemetery in Merion, is said to have made a very comfortable living. Lewis was arrested on complaint of, the Ardmore authorities. For ghousile hingenuity, the detectives declare, Lewis scheme outshines any criminal plot they have unearthed.

It is charged Lewis would sell a lot and immediately after the funeral service he would glu up the body which had just hern buried and take it to an obscure part of the grounds where he would bury it along with the same way. Then it is charged Lewis would sell the more desirable lots over agrib.

It is said Lewis took care to resell lots in cases where the relatives of the first person buried and not intend to erect a headsteen. Prequently relative stitling the cemetery have mourned over grave contended and not intend to erect a headsteen of other dead people whom they never knew.
