How Teens Can Aid Road Beauty

The State Highway Commission today suggested that the youth of Michigan pool its talent to aid the campaign to keep the state beautiful.

The suggestion was in response to recent offers of volunteer help in picking up tons of roadside trash discarded during the winter by litterbugs.

The Commission said that because of insurance and liability problems, it couldn't permit youngsters to work along state roadsides.

It said, however, that they could effectively aid the war against litterbugs by helping to inform the public of the health and safety hazards, and the unsightly appearances caused by litter.
