Spireas Are June's Bridal Wreaths Those kinds which flower on new growth should be pruned are produced in July on the four-foot plants. The spireas will grow in either sun or semi-shade but need a lot of moleture.

Attic Fan Gives

No need to lose your cool over the heat of summer. While whole-house alr-conditioning is not ultimate in cooling, it is possible to make your home comfortable without it.

tic will be the fan side.
Rule of thumb for size of an attic fan is one that will change the air in a house once every minute, every 11/2 minutes at least.
Fan capacity is rated incubic feet per minute -- multiply length times width times the height of the ceiling to get the cubic feet in your house.

A GOOD attic fan may run about $150 plus the cost of in-stallation. Cheaper though not so efficient is a large win-dow fan. There are types and sizes to fit every window.

Careful use of a window fan can work wonders, Again the best place is upstairs.

Locate it in a window on the sumny side of the house and close the other windows along that side. Open the windows on the shady side and downstairs where the air is cooler.

IF YOUR HOUSE is on a slab, try to install ground-level vents to admit air. Screen them and cover them so they can be closed in the winter.

If your house has a crawl space, it has a supply of cool air. Floor registers that can be opened in summer, closed in winter will tap this supply.

At the top of the house there should be vents to rid it of the warm air that piles up under the ceiling.

Most attic vents are too small, allow air to pile up and get hot and stagmant. Large, window-size vents are worth the cost of installation. Stock air vents can be in-stalled under the eaves. These louvered metal units are screened and are either round
