GROUND OBSERVER CORPS EXERCISE SET FOR STATE

State Police Commissioner Donald S. Leonard, who is also state civil defense director, has been notified by the Newburgh, N. Y., headquarters of the Eastern Air Defense Force that a test exercise for the newly organized ground observer corps in Michigan will be conducted on November 4 and 5.

The ground observer corps is designed to supplement the radar detection screen and function as a part of the air force's air defense system. It is being set up in the northeast, Great Lakes and west coast areas.

There are about 750 observation posts in Michigan, each of which will have a supervisor, a chief observer, two assistant chief observers and a crew of 20 or more observers. In event of an emergency the crews will be doubled in size to permit operation on a 24-hour basis with each individual on duty four hours a week. All personnel are volunteers.

Two filter centers, Grand Rapids for the lower peninsula and Green Bay, Wisconsin, for the upper peninsula, have been established to receive priority telephone calls from observers reporting the presence of unidentified or enemy aircraft.

From these reports it will be possible to plot the course of the planes and give the information to an air intercept command station. This station will also have any available radar reports and those will be used in connection with the filter center information to determine what part of the state should be alerted for a possible raid.

The state has already been divided into eleven air raid warning areas, each of which has a special air raid warning phone at a key center. A plan has also been prepared by which the state police communications system will be used to fan out any warnings to all communities and rural districts.

Many farmers are wondering about the present situation nationally and their responsibilities in this all-out effort for mobilization. There are two or three things that are very important for farmers to remember. First of all, there is definitely going to be an all-out effort industrially and agriculturally that may last for a number of years to come.

convinced that the Communists have no favor, that General MacArthur is the most popular man in Japan, and that the G.I. in Japan has a lot of Army-granted luxuries he sometimes doesn't appreciate.

Miss Leach was in charge of providing the G.I. with some of those luxuries. As part of the Army Service Club staff, she organized events and tours to provide recreation for the G.I. Some of the tours included trips to Japanese points of interest—shrines, festivals, professional baseball games, and similar activities aimed at getting the men away from their stations for a "break".

The invasion of Korea caused the absence of many regular customers at her Service Club, she says, but they were rapidly replaced by Americans fresh from the states, including Japan. Russians and Communists, aren't a major trouble, she says. Military headquarters keeps the Communists out in the open, rather than outlying the party, but there are apparently few takers. The Japanese have seen the proof of American doctrine in the fruits of the occupation," she believes.

Her only difficulty with the Russian soldiers attached to the embassy at Tokyo came during a water polo game between a score of Russians and a hastily-gathered like amount of G.I.s. However, the game went along fine until a few of the soldiers participating clouded up and looked threatening, at which time the lifeguard blew his whistle and the game was over.

"Thus averting an 'international' incident with an Army Recreational Director in the center," she says.

Miss Leach, who is living with her parents at 33309 Oakland, attended Franklin College in Indiana after graduation from Farmington High School. She taught briefly in South Bend, Indiana, and assisted Miss Minnie Ziska in the Elementary Department of the Farmington School District before leaving for Japan July 5, 1948. She plans to return to Japan about the first of December.

The first daily in the United States appeared in Philadelphia in 1784.

ROLLING DOWN THE RIVER

By Bob Kettler

We've discovered you might as well profit from the mistakes of others. You won't live long enough to make them all yourself.

That's because we maybe made a mistake ourselves the other day. Seems we got a too expert Bumping and Painting man in the town. Fellow who had a bit of an accident and rolled back a fender and grille had our expert give the car a bit of beauty treatment. So now just like in the Town and we, we, we went to the shop. Couldn't tell the job from new. That's when we made our mistake because we said, "You and we are the only ones who know your car has had an accident." The mistake? When trade-in time comes, we wonder, will he come to us?

Did we tell you of the real estate man who had a bit of trouble the other week? Seems he advertised a house, way out in the country, for sale, and some prospective buyers went out to see it. Back they came, a bit on the mad side and accused the agent of false advertising. House wasn't at all modern they said. Our agent denied the accusation. No false advertising from him, no sir, all the said was "House for Sale, Five Rooms and a Path".

Remember that old story of the guy who added so many gasoline savers to his car the stuff gradually overflew the tank? We figure the nearest approach to that is the new Studebaker. So many miles to the gallon of gas you wonder where the stuff is coming from. Why not discover for yourself how economical the Studebaker is? You'll be highly pleased but you won't have many gasoline dealer friends left.

Now we hope you are all aware of the United Foundations drive for funds and extend a friendly hand with a bit of a check to the soldier that knows an open door. It's a truly worthy cause.

Most of us know what's best for the next guy. Trouble is we want something better for ourselves.

Yours,

MEDAL OF HONOR CANDIDATE—Lt. James A. Harris of Boz. Ala., is credited with participating in one of the most heroic and spectacular actions yet to be reported in the Korean war. The tall and lanky Lieutenant led a patrol of five men into enemy territory, knocking out 10 machine guns and killing 40 North Koreans. Among the G.I.'s, his voluntary action is expected to earn him decorations for the patrol members and may win Harris the coveted Congressional Medal of Honor.

RE-TREE-VER—A dog that requires pruning instead of grooming is the proud possession of farmer W. L. Long of York, Neb., who fashions statues of animals from Chinese elm. In neighborhood dog shows, Long paces the sidewalks with his colleagues. The happy ending came when doctors declared Karla miraculously unharmed. Karla and Brian clung in the final scene and Brian's cowboy pal, at left, provided extra atmosphere by eating popcorn throughout the drama.
