Dye Can Revive
Many Old Rugs

Increasing prices of rugs and carpeting are causing many to take a second look at their old rugs and question whether they might be brightened and used a little longer.

You can revive an old rug and add several years of wear to it by giving it a dye bath, advises Dorothy Washburn, Michigan State College home economist. She believes the results are well worth the effort that the cost is very low and the project is simple.

It takes about six packages of the mini-dye of size that is boiled to dye a 9' x 12' rug. It is possible to combine colors of dyes to obtain a desired color as you would combine water colors or oil paints.

Follow the directions on the package of dye for preparing it, but don't dilute it. Keep the strength.

Take a small amount of dye at a time, leaving the rest on the stove so that it can stay hot. Then take a scrub brush about 10 inches long and dip it into the dye bath. Scrub it into the nap of the rug, beginning at one end and continuing to the other end. It is preferable to dye it twice.

Let the rug dry thoroughly and then rub it with a carpet or a piece of clean cloth.

In a dyed rug it is generally the background color that shows the wear. You can revive the background color by making a dye bath to match it and using a small brush. An old tooth brush will get into the smaller places successfully.

The dollar now is worth only 60 cents — lowest purchasing power it had commanded since 1914 when the federal reserve system was set up. This decrease in value is cutting the treasury's "E" bond sales. Ten years ago, if one invested $75, he now gets $100 in return — which still will buy only 60 worth of food.

Senator Vandenberg's fight to regain health has become top news in Washington. Internationalists believe this powerful voice of Michigan's should be used to help settle disputes. Isolatists are not likely to reverse the whole recent trend of American foreign policy.

Beaver Island Hunters Bag 40 Sharp-tail Grouse

First sharp-tail grouse hunting ever allowed by the conservation department at Beaver Island attracted 16 hunters who shot 40 birds. The season closed November 5.

This was an average of two and one-half birds each.

Sharp-tail was introduced on this Chippewa River island ten years ago and the original colony of 25 birds is estimated to now have increased to over 200.
