ADVICE ON TOWN'S TREE CARE GIVEN BY MSC FORESTER

The word "forestry" usually brings to mind large tracts of timber. However, Bill Love, Michigan State College forester, says towns and cities should think of "municipal forestry" as an aid to beautifying their communities.

In recent years many larger cities have established forestry departments to handle the work of planting and caring for city trees.

The forestry extension department of Michigan State College, realizing that only larger towns can afford to hire trained foresters, offers assistance to communities wishing to develop sound programs of tree planting and care. Contacts for this service can be made through county agricultural agents, located at the county seat.

Love, who heads the municipal forestry for the extension service, says: "We should not make the mistakes of city planners in the past; too many selected softwooded, fast growing trees such as soft maples, cottonwoods, box elders and Chinese elms. Such trees are too easily damaged by wind and sleet. Over-aged inferior species, quite often planted too close together, create a big maintenance and removal problem, and considerable training is required to accomplish the job safely."

Love suggests for replacement plantings — and on newly developed areas — the planting of hardwooded, long lived trees such as sugar maple, black maple, Norway maple, American sycamore, and hackberry.

Other good species are available, including special pyramidal forms of maples and small growing species for narrow, crowded streets. He believes it would be well to limit spacing of street trees to a minimum of 50 feet or more to permit adequate room for root and crown development.

Municipal officials should address questions concerning their forestry problems to the Cooperative Extension Service, Michigan State College, East Lansing, Michigan.

Man Held Up For $79.50

Mr. William Emil of Helford Drive was held up late Tuesday afternoon in his home. He alleges that he can positively identify the party who took his money as Mr. McGlocklin of Farmington.

According to statements made, Emil was held up by a chain he was sitting in. The chair was beautifully upholstered and recovered for only $79.50 by Farmington Upholstery, 32425 Eighth Mile Road West. Mr. McGlocklin feels that the following distinction should be made: "We won't hold you up but our guaranteed work will." The phone place — Farm. 2042. Its an ad.
