Remember a few weeks ago when we told you about the young father who had just recovered from polio and was job-hunting? He is Willard Casagnette of 9341 Seminole Street, Livonia, and he still is frantically looking for work. "Anything!" to support his wife and two little daughters.

Willard had a good work record as a stock taker in the stock department of a factory before he was stricken with polio a year ago. Now he needs a sitting-down job and is eager to learn any trade he can do with his hands. He drives a car and walks quite easily, though job-hunting during the winter months has been very hard on him. He says that when employers see the braces on his legs they are "frantically looking for work."

A note on the table was Jackie LeBlanc's way of saying "So Long" to her folks last week when she left to join the Weaves. Her parents and brother Jerry come downstairs for breakfast sadly that Monday morning, for it was Jackie's last day home and they weren't yet used to the idea. Jackie's note and a phone call later said she was on her way to Great Lakes where she is now in boot training. Of course, her magical guitar went along, too, and we're sure this singin' gal will find an important future. Also a fine secretary, she was employed for several years in the office of Edgar Pierce of Farmington. She graduated from Clarenceville High in 1941.

Flu of two different varieties has taken over just about every house in our neighborhood on Ojibwa Street. Last Street, unluckily, has had both types. He was happily over the first but when another attack returned him to bed. Mrs. Hallock is down with the flu this week, too.

BROWNIES, GIRL SCOUTS LEAD BUSY LIVES

Brownies and Intermediate Girl Scouts and their leaders, Mrs. F. K. Soules, Mrs. Louis Nolan, Mrs. Wade Dickerson, Mrs. Frances Kenney, Mrs. Harry J. Woods, Mrs. Guy Boatman and Mrs. John Quinlan have been very busy these past few weeks previous to the Girl Scouts 39th birthday.

Twenty-seven girls were invested as Scouts at a service Valentine's Day; the older Brownies received yearly pendants and the new ones their "Brownie" pins. A new troop line has been established to absorb all the interested girls.

Through the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. John Mackay, who were able to obtain 50 tickets, 42 Scouts and 20 Brownies, with their leaders and parents who drove, attended the Shrine circus Saturday. All had "nosebag" lunches and were enjoying to the limit. However, the group was given immediate entrance.

Scouts of Intermediate Troop 174 will present "That Husband's Day" play and variety show, at the Middlebelt School this Friday evening at 8 p.m. Girls will earn their Merit Badges in dramatics and money for troop expenses.

Intermediate Girl Scouts of Troop 195 of the Children's Convalescent Home are busy dressing dolls to represent different countries of the world. A world map is being constructed out of paper mache with four hands representing different nationalities extended in friendship and world peace. Flags are being made denoting the different countries where Girl Scouting is active. The display, to be shown in the Farmington State Bank window, is the work of Miss Patricia Flannery and her troop of girls as their contribution toward the 39th birthday of Girl Scouting, March 12.
