SIC INFLATION TO SCHOOL SPIRIT

Once upon a time, not so long ago, there was a man named Not G. Nimrod who owned a little dog whom he called School Spirit.

Now little Spirit was like no other dog in the world. He was so full of vim, vigor and vitality that he could out-bark, out-play, and out-last any of the neighboring dogs.

And do you know what was the secret of his success? — his breakfast food. Every morning Not G. Nimrod fed little Spirit bowl after bowl at "Falcon Cheerios", and little by little School Spirit began to grow.

Soon he had grown into a full size dog and then, believe it or not, he was elected to compete with the inter-lake dogs in the variety sports of pigskin, cakewalk-the-basket, hit-and-run, and catch-me-if-you-can. Oh, how happy the little dog was! He was playing with the best of dogs and sometimes winning. At first the other dogs had laughed at School Spirit because he was younger than they were. But our little champion wasn't disturbed in the least. He turned their jeering into victories and soon took first place in almost every sport. School Spirit was in his glory!

But then, just as everything was going so well, the price of breakfast food went up! Not G. Nimrod couldn't afford to buy little Spirit as much as a growing dog should have. At first the price wasn't too high, but then it grew and grew. First it was 40c, then 47c, 45c, 49c, 50c and finally reached an all time high of 51c.

Poor little School Spirit! With "Falcon Cheerios" at 51c a game box, Not G. Nimrod could only afford to buy him one bowl a week. School Spirit grew weaker and weaker. Finally a great inventor by the name of Sophomores discovered a magic serum that would keep School Spirit strong. He called it "Pep". Sophomores went to the S. C. Patent office to get permission to use his office to get permission to use his serum on feeding School Spirit, but the S. C. wasn't so sure "Pep" was the right cure for weakened School Spirit. Besides, summer would soon come and School Spirit didn't play an important part in dog activities during this season.

But what about the next fall when School Spirit will be full to participate in pigskin, and cakewalk-the-basket and the rest of the dog variety sports? With the price of "Falcon Cheerios" still rising, would the "Pep" serum be too late in reaching poor School Spirit? Who knows? R. P.
