One Month . . .

of rule under the new charter of the City of Farming ton has gone by the board and everything is still here. In fact, a number of constructive and progressive projects have been started.

sive projects have been started.

In spite of many dire things predicted by the opponents of the new City Charter, everything seems to be in place. Taxes have not been increased and there is no hint that they will be. There is more adequate help at the Municipal Building and more contemplated. The citizens of the city seem to be well represented, at least they haven't found any need to demand more voice.

templated. The citizens of the city seem to be well represented, at least they haven't found any need to demand more voice.

Most of the past month has been spent in organization and the building of a sound foundation for Farmington City government. In the meantime, there has not been the confusion that a few would have liked us to think there would be. Naturally the change-over will be gradual and that is as it should be. By July 2, the city will have a new City Manager and, from all indications, a well qualified one. A total of 10 applications were received and six of the applicants were interviewed by the Council. Several of the Council stated that the job of salecting the new manager will be extremely difficult because of the apparent high caliber of the applicants. It was also pointed out that an experienced and qualified manager can be employed at less cost to the City than a few wanted us to believe.

Important steps are under way in making Farmington a more efficient, more progressive city. Business is continuing and even increasing in benefit to the citizens. Residents still have democracy and at the same time a healthy start toward a more business-like-government. Who is benefitting? The answer was obvious two months ago—it is even more obvious now. Every resident in the City of Farmington interested in progressive, efficient government.

Interest In Zoning . . .

in Farmington Township seems to be on the increase, if inquiries mean anything, at least. It is a healthy and a hopeful sign, not just because any interest in government is healthy, but because those interested in protecting their homes and their township have reason to be hopeful.

Public health and safety is protection in the Lessonsermon which will be read to that it could be studied and changed by the people before it becomes law is ample proof of protection.

An equal effort should be made on the part of every property owner to read and know the ordinance. No one wants to restrict residents from using their own property as they see fit, provided it does not threaten the health and safety of others. Most people came to Farmington to escape the large city. They came here where they can have more land and less restriction. However, unless this property is protected it, too, will become less desirable, and the investment made by the majority of the owners will be lost or greatly reduced.

there are definitely two sides to the question of changing the primary election date from September to June. It is what is underneath that makes for interesting conjecture.

The Republican-sponsored bill, which Governor Williams vetoed, is designed outwardly to give servicemen and women a greater opportunity to vote. However, the Republicans have been quoted privately as sponsoring the bill to give GOP candidates a greater opportunity to campaign against present Democratic office holders.

No one wants to deny anyone an opportunity to cratic office holders.

No one wants to deny anyone an opportunity to vote—but at the same time we do not want to weaken our democratic system by giving any one party an advantage over the other. Servicemen's absentee ballots were handled with little disturbance during the last war—why wasn't it mentioned then? Let's put a starting date on campaigning that will be binding on both parties and keep confusion in voting to a minimum.
