SOUTH AMERICANS CATCH MICHIGAN, NEW YORK TROUT

In Peru they are catching lake trout with Michigan ancestors. The successful introduction of Michigan and New York lake trout in Lake Titicaca, highest navigable lake in the world, is reported to the conservation department by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Arch Halloway, federal fisheries biologist, made a recent management study of the Peru lake in the heart of the Andes mountains, also discloses that the attempt to introduce Lake Erie whitefish was a failure. Reports of unusual fishing in Lake Titicaca have drifted back to the conservation department on several occasions.

First shipments of about 600,000 trout eggs was a Michigan contribution in the 1933-39 winter. One of the most unusual shipments in air history, the load of eggs first was airfreighted from the Thompson hatchery near Manistique to Chicago. Taxied to the airport, the load then was flown to Miami and then shipped out on another plane for the final leg of the journey. New York made a shipment the following year. Other Michigan shipments were made in 1941.

Shipping containers were designed so the eggs could be kept and the temperature could be kept exactly right, insuring safe arrival in Peru.

1905, under the "Story of the Dollars $ $ $".

"A few months ago the members of the Ladies Union, wishing to raise a sum of money, pledged themselves individually to contribute not less than $1 each, and as much more as by special exertion they could earn for this specific purpose."

"They were very successful, and the history of their efforts was held in the Town Hall on the evening of October 21, by Mrs. Florence G. Moore, in the form of a very pleasing poem which we reproduce."

The joyful poem covered almost two thirds of the Enterprise page and recounted how each of 50 women had earned her dollar or more, all for needed church repairs.

Apart from the anticipated baking, canning, cheese-making, knitting, baby-sitting, quilting, etc., some highly unusual occupations were reported at the "Experience Social", for instance:

Mary S. Green drove a man to a train in a storm; Mrs. German blacked shoes; Ella Steele's four daughters voted a day in Lahser's store; one woman killed flies at 10 cents a dozen; Mrs. Skinner painted the house and donated the money she saved; Anna Thayer, who tutored Latin, and Eva Sprague sold her husband Elliott's wagon tongue. Since then he's had to draw his loads with "thills."

The Ladies Union acknowledged contributions from Governor Warner, M. T. Murray, Mary Power and Wellington Simmons.

Among the members mentioned in the poem were the following: Ellen Adams, Mrs. Lou Allen, Mrs. Blanchard, the Botsfords, Ada Buton, Electa Chilson, Ella Darrow, etc., then 80; Helen Gray, Nettie Hogle, Belle Hostenburg, Minnie Moore, Mary Mosher, Ida and Pearl Sprague, Emma Perry, Jennie Power, Mrs. Riley, Mrs. Roberts, Metta Seeley, Maude Sherman, Pearl Sprague, Ida and Zaida Steele, Laura Thayer, Mrs. Frank Wilson and Clara Wilson.

Such a venture was a precursor to the "talent" projects of later years, one of which is in progress at this writing (1951). In the spring the church treasurer passed out a sum of money to each person in the congregation who was willing to try to "make it grow" for the Lord's benefit. In the fall, an inventory will be held at which the talents and their accrual will be turned in and each person will relate his methods of gaining the increase.

Some of the family names just mentioned will unmistakably be recorded again at the autumnal report.

neighborhood congregated to see 13-year-old "Cheenu" a real Indian girl whom the Russmans adopted in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. House had just returned from New York City where, accompanied by her sister, Miss Naomi Hoke of New Canisteo, Ohio, they had "done the town" for a whole week. Their headquarters was a hotel, while their children stayed at the home of relatives in Lapeer.

"Step back, girly, and let the teachers through," Miss Eleanor Foley was told by a gentleman who didn't know that she was the new schoolmum. Even though as young as many of her pupils, Miss Foley proved herself a whizz-bang teacher and the other night, 17 years later, the memories were all rehashed at the Don Ward home on Jacksonville Street. The school was at Downeyville, Ontario, but Miss Foley is now from Montreal and "looks still as young as she did then," according to the many who hadn't seen her in all these years. Twenty-two of the "Lucas Clan" were in the Ward's beautiful garden to greet her. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Platter were here from Pontiac, from Grosse Pointe came Dr. and Mrs. S. Lucas, and from Highland Park, the Joseph Lucas family. Also from Highland Park was Charles Steehan, and from Detroit Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Lucas, Claire Sculley, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Foley. Also enjoying the stories and campfire songs were neighbors Mr. and Mrs. Ward O'Hara of Jacksonville Street.

Another lady honored last week end was Miss Hazel Hayes of Bate Creek, Michigan. A nurse, she took nurses' training with her girlhood friend, Mrs. Thomas Munro of Scotton Street. A steak barbecue in the Donald Ruff's yard Sunday brought relatives and friends of Miss Hayes, who spent the week end here. Chief chefs were Thomas Munro, Tom Saffady and Donald Ruff.
