Vivian Whalen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Whalen of 31000 Fargo, became the bride of Daniel Scheans, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Scheans of 1825 Ashbury Park, Detroit, in a double ring ceremony performed at Our Lady of Sorrows Church by Rev. H. Henghold Saturday morning, August 25.

Standing before the flower decorated altar, the bride wore a white lace, princess style, ankle length gown with a fingertip veil for her headpiece. She carried a bouquet of semi-cascade cream roses and baby mums.

Mrs. Samuel Whalen, mother of the bride, wore a grey silk crepe dress with pink roses while the groom's mother, Mrs. Daniel Scheans, wore a grey and black taffeta dress with tea roses.

Maid of honor Helen Curran wore a lavender dotted Swiss over taffeta gown and carried a yellow rose cascade bouquet. Bridesmaids were Esther Giffin and Jane Nolan.

During the rites an organist played Ave Maria and This Day.

Best man was Robert Scheans, brother of the groom. Groomsmen were Donald Whalen and Charles Worpell. Donald Worpell and James Worpell served as ushers.

A reception at the American Legion Hall in Farmington with 200 guests was held at 8 p.m. The bride attended Mercy College.

Farm-To-Market Story Told In Big Display

A mammoth 90-foot long exhibit, complete with photographs, movie films and slides, mechanical devices and actual farm produce for action plenty awaits visitors to the 1951 Michigan State Fair.

It's been a big building job for workers at Michigan State College and will be on display in Agricultural Hall at the fairgrounds in Detroit until September 9, according to A. B. Love, MSC agricultural economist.

The giant display will tell the story of how services performed by farmers, jobbers, wholesalers and retail grocers fit together to help you get your weekly market basket well-filled.

If you substitute powdered sugar for granulated sugar when whipping cream, the whipped cream won't get watery in the bottom of the dish after it sets a while, MSC specialists point out.
