

THIS SUNBURST LOCUS was planted on the Orchard Ridge campus of Oakland Community College as a memorial to Paula Peplowski, mother of Mrs. Pauline Rosinski, (right) who donated the tree to the Farmington campus. "I think this is what she would have liked most," Mrs. Rosinski said. She and instructor Charles Shuler, background, and Mrs. Chris Sechler of Farmington planted the tree not far from the whale sculpture Mrs. Rosinski made and also donated to the Farmington campus. Marburger New Dean For LIT

Dr. Richard E. Marburger, 44, of Birmingham, has been promoted to dean of academic affairs in a major administration move at the Lawrence Institute of Technology.

The appointment is announced by President Wayne H. Buell, who simultaneously expanded the responsibility of the dean's office to include administrative authority over the admissions department, the registrar and computer laboratory, in addition to LIT's five schools and the library.

Dr. Marburger, 44, of Birmingham, has headed one of the LIT schools - Arts and Science - for the past two years. His scientific career covers a span of 20 years, at the General Motors Research Laboratories, as a lieutenant in the U.S. Air Force and at LIT.

WHILE IN the Air Force, Dr. Marburger collaborated on the development of the USAF cadmium sulfide photovoltaic cell which converts sunlight directly into electricity, and published papers on the subject.

During his 17-year career at the GM Research Laboratories, he made many important contributions to technology including x-ray diffraction techniques which are of great value to physicists, chemists, metallurgists, and mechanical engineers.

Dr. Marburger, a native of Detroit, earned three degrees at Wayne State University, including doctor of philosophy, and was elected to membership in the honorary scientific society, Sigma Xi. He is a member of the American Physical Society, the Engineering Society of Detroit, the American Association of Physics Teachers, and is past chairman of the Michigan chapter of the American Crystallographic Association.
