

Old Politicians Should Be Retired

EDITOR: Why is it that government people, like judges, congressmen, etc., can stay in their positions until they are 70, 80 or 90, but the average worker has to retire at 65? What chance will the younger men ever have if judges, etc., hold on till they are so old, the youngest to take their jobs fall into the 65 or 70 year category before they can fill the position.

Men and women who are in these positions should be forced to retire at 65. Give the younger men a chance.

Speaking of retiring, you wouldn't happen to know when Judge Rost was 64 on April 21 this year, plans to retire? Any chance of it being early?

Disembowling Journalism

EDITOR:

Tim Richard's article on Wallace supporters generated a great deal of heat. You had to be amused or abused, depending upon your viewpoint. In fact it was a shabby attempt to discredit, and it was poor journalism.

The problem is not whether we will become obese or attend bingo parties if we vote for Wallace. The problem is in what ways we have changed (for Wallace has not) in an appeal to bad feelings wins a vote where an appeal to proper thinking does not.

Journalists would do better to address themselves to the intensifying wish of the American people to find a leader who will have omnipotence in solving problems and relieving frustrations and a people who are willing to offer a "blank check" to cover the cost.

The danger that we may find that leader some day is not paramount with George Wallace. It awaits a future generation if we continue in this direction.

If Tim Richard's article were unique in editorials today, it might not be worth a comment. However, the literary "mirror" he held up to Wallace supporters has been used innumerable times in the past. If that same "mirror" were held up to Blacks or Jews or Catholics, we might more readily identify the nature of this writing.

No matter who the "goat" is, the writing is disgraceful and it shruts off minds. If we are to judge our politics within a broader philosophical context, if we are yet to arrive at a choice of leadership by way of our reason; it is vitally necessary that the journalists of this land do not pursue the course of emotionalism and false argument. To abdicate their responsibility in that manner would be to disembowel themselves.

Schoolcraft Enrollment

Start College Early: July 11-12

Like registrars everywhere, Schoolcraft's Russ Bogarin recommends students register as early as possible. For the fall semester at Schoolcraft College, that means July 11 and 12.

Advance registration is being held that Tuesday and Wednesday, and although Bogarin has been on the job less than two weeks, he can give a lot of good reasons for taking advantage of the early dates.

"It's comforting for students to know they are enrolled in the classes they want, at the times they want them," he said. "Then, too, it's nice to have your fees all paid so you can just relax until classes start in August."

The advance registration July 11 begins at 8:30 for students planning to graduate at the end of the semester. From 9:30 to 3, sophomores with last names from A to Z will be registered.

On the second day, freshmen with last names starting with A will report at 8:30, and registration will continue alphabetically until 3:30.

Evening students will register from 6-8:30 both nights. All registration is conducted in the auxiliary gym in Schoolcraft's Physical Education Building.

Persons new to the college will need to visit the Admissions Office prior to advance registration. Returning students will need to have consulted their counselors. Regular registration for the fall is scheduled for Aug. 21-22, with classes starting two days later.

SC Donations Are Accepted

A donation for the survey on senior citizens needs was among those accepted by the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees recently.

The board accepted a $300 gift from the Schoolcraft College Foundation to be used for the survey study project on educational needs of local senior citizens. The survey is being conducted through the community services office.

Other gifts totaling $1,015 were accepted by the board. American Assn. of University Women, Plymouth branch, for the Jane K. Moehle scholarship and Mildred Levering loan fund; $150 from the SC Assn. of Office Personnel; $500 from the college's Women's Club; and $300 from the Western Suburban Women's Club all for the scholarship and loan fund.

In addition, the board accepted the donation of six turbo-hydraulic transmissions from the Chevrolet division of the General Motors Corp. for the automotive instructional program. The value of the transmissions was estimated at $1,350.
