Schoolcraft May Get A Hand From State

Contrary to original projections, it now looks as though Schoolcraft College will get help from the state in constructing its $1.1 million addition to the applied sciences building.

When the college finalized its plans to go ahead with construction of the 25,000 square foot addition, it had been notified that the state wouldn't allot matching funds to help cover the cost.

That meant that the college would have to almost deplete its building and site funds to go ahead with the badly needed classroom space to have it ready for occupancy in the fall of 1973.

But the circumstances have changed since the State Legislature passed the capital outlay bill including $5,000 for Schoolcraft's vocational-technical addition.

The $5,000 is to help the college get started on the project, according to Dr. C. Nelson Grote, Schoolcraft president.

And if past practices of the State Legislature set a pattern, the college should get up to half the cost of the building from the Legislature next year.

AN OFFICIAL from the Capitol fiscal agency said the state is not obligated to come up with the funding next year, but the $5,000 grant makes the college eligible for additional money if the state has enough funds next year.

The vocational addition will take programs that are scattered around campus and off-campus and concentrate them in the applied sciences building.

The occupational therapy program has been located in Northville State Hospital but is being displaced this year because the hospital needs the three classrooms. The college is currently looking for space to hold the classes.

When the addition is completed, this program will finally be brought on campus.

Also in the addition will be space for the electromedical program, civil technology, business careers, and additional space for the automotive program.

Miniature Circus Is Displayed

A miniature hand-carved circus, which is a replica of an old-fashioned American circus, will be displayed at the Livonia Mall, Seven Mile and Middle Belt, from July 20 to 25.

The colorful circus features 80,000 pieces of equipment, animals, wagons and figures carved from wood and painted by Jean LeBoey. It will be displayed during the mall's clearance sales.

Complete from circus train to street parade, the exhibit represents 27 years of work by LeBoey, who once was in a clown team with his brother for the Cole Brothers' Circus.

Many of the figures and acts in the miniature circus are reproductions of real show people. The circus is titled Ringling Brothers' Circus.
