Congregation Sets Holiday Services

Rabbi Martin Gordon will speak at High Holiday services at the Livonia Jewish Congregation, 31840 W. Seven Mile, Livonia.

The first service will be held Friday, Sept. 8, at 7 p.m. It will be followed by Rosh Hashanah services at 8:30 a.m., Sept. 9 and 10. There will also be a service at 8:30 a.m., Monday, Sept. 18, in observance of the Yom Kippur, and at 6:30 p.m., Sept. 17.

In speaking of the holiday season, Rabbi Gordon said: "As the summer draws to a close, as the foliage, animals and insects ready themselves for the winter, as the rich production of the earth fades into its final harvest, at this time the Jew readies himself to face the new year that awaits him with hope, promise and prayer."

"He thanks God for the joy and fulfillment of the departing year and dedicates the new dawn to worthwhile goals. At this time the Jew reflects on life's problems, reflects upon its meaning and considers how its value and quality can be improved."

"The keynote of the day of Rosh Hashanah is a spirit of quiet confidence in which man seeks to overcome the hindrances to better living by placing his love and trust in God. The rabbi at this time hopes that these 'Days of Awe' as they are called, will influence the lives of his people for the year to come."

Kol Ami To Mark Holidays

Temple Kol Ami, lead by Rabbi Ernst Conrad, will hold High Holiday services in the Hillside Day School, 3200 Middle Belt, between Northwestern Highway and 14 Mile Road, at 3:30 p.m., Sept. 8.

A morning service will be held at 10 a.m., Saturday, Sept. 9, and a children's service at 2:30 p.m., Saturday.

This will usher in the eight-day period of the Jewish New Year or Rosh Hashanah. The season, beginning with rejoicing, ends with fasting and prayer for the atonement of sins on Yom Kippur. This marks the year 5733 in the Jewish calendar.

Yom Kippur services will be conducted Sunday, Sept. 17, at 8:30 p.m., in the school. Services will also be conducted throughout the day Monday, Sept. 18, beginning at 10 a.m.

Catholic Club Meets Sept. 8

Religion Update

Headline writers have been enjoying a theological field day with two discoveries this year which one religion columnist went so far as to claim has "strengthened enormously the historical basis of the Christian faith."

But if the allotted speculations of two Hebrew University professors and a Catholic priest-papologist constitute an "enormous strengthening," the historicity of Jesus would have been regarded as practically nil to begin with. The discoveries:

REV. KINSOLVING

(1) PROFESSORS Shlomo Pines and David Flusser of Jerusalem report an Arabic text of 1st century Jewish historian Flavius Josephus' description of Jesus. They claim that this Arabic text shows more authenticity and less evidence of Christian tampering than the widely-published Greek text of Josephus, which most scholars reject.

The Arabic text, for example, mentions the resurrection as being reported by the disciples—rather than the Greek text's simply reporting the resurrection as fact. But this Arabic text is dated nearly 1,000 years after the crucifixion and is written by a Christian bishop named Agapius.

Father Jose O'Callaghan, S.J. of Rome, has taken a tiny and hitherto overlooked fragment of the Dead Sea Scrolls and, hypothesized it into the earliest known fragment of the New Testament—dated 90 years prior to the Rylands fragment (110 A.D.). One unrestrained observer suggested that the "New Sanhedrin" — with the plea that the trial of Jesus be rediffed.

After 20 years of research on the subject, Justice Cohn has written "The Trial and Death of Jesus," for Harper and Row. He argues legally and persuasively that in holding "The Jews" responsible for the death of Jesus, the Gospel writers were attempting to placate the Roman government.

"Those Apostles and Jesus were hardly Gentiles you know!" laughed Justice Cohn during an interview with this writer.

The eminent jurist notes that the Sanhedrin had the power to execute Jesus, if that had been its desire. But he contends that it would have been inconceivable that Jewish court would confess its inability to maintain law and order among the Jews — especially by offering up a popular Jew as one more Jewish victim of Rome.

Instead, he maintains that the Sanhedrin tried assiduously to persuade Jesus to abandon his claim to Messiahship — for which the Romans crucified Him (with a sign, "King of the Jews"), rather than for his upstaging the money changers in the Temple.

Justice Cohn also contends that it is similarly inconceivable for a Roman imperial governor like Pontius Pilate to degrade himself by arguing with or appealing his innocence to a crowd of conquered subjects.

Dr. Roy Eckhardt, professor of religion at Pennsylvania's Lehigh University, notes that Cohn's book may help substantially in eliminating "slander and lies against an entire people...history's greatest perversion of justice."

Hebrew School To Start

The Beth Abraham-Hillel Synagogue will open its congregational religious Hebrew school on Sunday, Sept. 3, under the direction of Harry Jubas.

The school will be in the educational annex of the new synagogue, West Maple between Inkerster and Middle Belt, West Bloomfield.

Registration will take place Sept. 3 with the first class session on Sept. 7. Sunday school starts on Oct. 8.

Jubas is a teacher in the Oak Park schools and has taught 12 years at Beth Shalom Hebrew School. His master's degree is in secondary education from Wayne State University and he is working on his doctorate. He recently returned from a year's sabbatical in Israel.

Jubas will also supervise the synagogue's youth groups which are now accepting enrollments.
